New Clue in Girl's Slaying

POPE PIUS XI

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Vatican City, Dec. 23 (INS)—In prayer and prayer alone lies the hope for salvation of mankind and the peace of all the world, Pope Pius XI declared today in a Christmas message to the Sacred College of Cardinals.

Disclaiming any intention of making a speech "either of great or small importance," the Supreme Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church addressed his cardinals in simple terms, but with great emotion.

In the course of his address, the Pontiff declared he remains strongly opposed to sterilization.

This comment was regarded as significant owing to the recently-instituted eugenics campaign of the Hitler government in Germany, providing for sterilization of sex criminals and the feeble-minded.

The mere fact Legislatures have undertaken sterilization as a move toward "social betterment" does not shake the Church's firm opposition to such measures, the Pontiff said.

He referred to his decree of 1931 on the subject and also to his famed encyclical on marriage.

In both he voiced vigorous op-

AUTHORITY in Russia, trying vainly to believe that God doesn't exist, dislikes the "Christmas spirit" and orders "100 per cent attendance of workers at their jobs Christmas Day."

Even at their jobs, they can see the sky, and at night, when they go home, they will see the stars, and still ask, as Napoleon did on the ship bound for St. Helena, "Who made all that?"

Russia is told that the Christian religion is "counter-revolutionary, used by capitalists, Fascists and clergy to conceal war preparations, to resist the revolutionary movement, and to justify starvation, poverty and unemployment." The would-be atheists of Russia must have read the Bible carelessly, for in the New Testament is the first revolutionary movement.

TRAINER LINKED IN HORSE DOPING

Detroit, Dec. 23 (INS)—A capias was issued by Federal Judge Edward J. Moinet today for the arrest of Joe F. Patterson, nationally known horse trainer who, with four other horse handlers, was indicted yesterday on charges of "doping" two horses here last fall.

Patterson is head of the famous Audley Stable Farm. Federal agents say a note in his handwriting directing stable employes to dope "Knight's Gal" and "Royal Blunder" connected him with the plot although he was not here at the time of the meet.

The others indicted are Robert Wingfield, trainer for Audley Stables at the Detroit Fair Grounds; Thomas Murray, stable handler; Morton Smith, barn boss for Audley Stables, and Horace Moore, Negro barn boy. They are charged specifically with narcotic law violations.

Murray, Moore and Wingfield are free in $3000 bond each, while Patterson and Smith are to be arrested. The first three were arrested here Oct. 8, as they were attempting to dope "Knight's Gal."

Albert Daignault, 12, and Chester Kusch, 10, both of Webster. The body of Daignault was recovered.

SEE CLOTHES AS KEY TO BAKERY KILLING

Two bundles of blood-stained clothing—men's clothing, were in the hands of police today, as the manhunt for Ethel Zuckerman's slayer assumed proportions unrivalled in police procedure.

Detectives were posted at a Jamaica Plain cleaning plant shortly thereafter. It was learned that a swarthy man had left a stained overcoat and suit on Thursday morning, the day following the murder.

He said he would call Saturday.

The other bundle contained inner clothing and had been sent to a laundry. Whether or not it was the same size as the outer garments police refused to divulge.

The bundles were given police as a result of a call sent to all laundries and cleaning companies for suspicious garments. It was thought the slayer might have dispatched his clothing to a cleaner to get rid of it.

Boston's ace detectives, Sergt. Arthur Tiernan, Special Officer William J. Bonner and Lieutenant-Inspector John A. Dorsey and Edward J. Keating, led the plain-clothes probers.

They and Capt. James R. Claffin's men from Division 4, South End, where the 18-year-old bakery girl was slain, went over every clue that had been found in the hunt and turned over every source of new clues.

SPURRED BY FLAHERTY

They were spurred by the lash of the head of the bureau of criminal investigation, Capt. Stephen J. Flaherty, who in an unprecedented "fight talk" told them they must get the killer if it meant working night and day.

He told them to get the killer before nightfall or they would spend tomorrow and Christmas at the job. Failure means cancellation of any days off for detectives and it means

Troopers, Scouts Seek Missing Boy

Providence, R. I., Dec. 23—Twenty state troopers, 250 Boy Scouts and many policemen made an intensive search today for Leonard Beck, six, who disappeared at midnight. There is no suspicion of kidnaping, but the tender age of the missing boy has spurred on the search. He is the son of Daniel Beck, an unemployed mill worker, of North Providence.

O'DUFFY TO FACE NEW CRIME CHARGE

Dublin, Irish Free State, Dec. 23 (AP)—General Eoin O'Duffy, co-leader of the United Ireland party, today was summoned to appear before a military tribunal on a charge of inciting to murder President Eamon de Valera.

A report was published in Dublin that O'Duffy said, in the course of a speech, "De Valera is entitled to the fate he gave Mick Collins and Kevin O'Higgins." O'Duffy, however, denied he had made such a statement.

O'Duffy wrote the editor that the report of the speech, "is not a correct report," and made the speech "appear to contain very grave implications."

"I take this very first opportunity after my release from illegal custody," wrote O'Duffy, "to publish my emphatical denial, that I, by word or implication or in any other way stated or suggested that 'Mr. De Valera is entitled to the fate he gave Mick Collins and Kevin O'Higgins.'

"Needless to say I would not stand for any such suggestion."

REVERE WOMAN IS DYING OF WOUNDS

Stabbed repeatedly about the face and neck, allegedly by her husband acting in a jealous rage, Mrs. Lillian Saffet, 34, of Campbell ave., Revere, was in dangerous condition today in Massachusetts General Hospital.

His clothing was bloodstained, according to authorities, and, when searched, he was found to have in his possession a three-cornered file, ground into a makeshift stiletto. The weapon, police said, was also bloodstained.

$20 BLAZE TIES UP SHOPPING TRAFFIC

Fire in a restaurant grease flue near Washington, Winter and Summer sts., paralyzed traffic, blocked sidewalks and disrupted the last-minute shopping of thousands of men and women today.

The worst jam in months occurred when firemen, in answer to a still alarm, were forced to lay a line of hose across the street, jammed with automobiles and seething with shoppers.

Harassed traffic policemen attempted to clear the traffic by diverting it to Winter and Summer sts., but it was nearly an hour before Washington st., was cleared.

CHRISTMAS GIFT LANDS IN ICEBOX

Washington, Dec. 23 (INS)—Three days ago a large Christmas package arrived at the White House for Miss Marguerite LeHand, confidential secretary to the President.

It was about five feet long and twelve inches in diameter.

"Must be flowers," she said, and had the box put in the icebox.

Just before departing for her home in Somerville, Mass., today to spend Christmas, Miss LeHand remembered the package and had it opened.

It was an immense doll, dressed in Bohemian costume.

The White House is receiving the greatest avalanche of Christmas presents and greetings the American people ever lavished on a president.

Incoming mails pour basket after basket of expressions of cheer and thankfulness into the bins hastily set up. From coast to coast, from tiny towns and great cities, it seemed that almost every one of America's 120,000,000 people sent something—if only a postal card—in behalf of the "new Deal" and the first lady of the land. Mail has totaled more than 25,000 pieces daily.

MAYOR-ELECT APPOINTS 9, M'NARY TO BE CENSOR

Mayor-elect Frederick W. Mansfield today appointed Joseph M. Mellyn of 11 Mayfair st., Roxbury, his secretary for the coming administration.

At the same time the incoming city executive named Herbert L. McNary, 1044 Adams st., Dorchester, as city censor and appointed four assistant secretaries, a messenger, chauffeur and telephone operator.

Mellyn is a former assistant secretary to U. S. Senator David I. Walsh. He was once connected with the public works department and served as chief clerk of the mayor's office in Mayor Curley's first administration.

McNARY PLAYWRIGHT

McNary, married and father of two children, is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is an author and playwright, and has two plays in preparation for production in New York. His father, John T. McNary, was once Boston city paymaster and brother of the late former Congressman William McNary.

Those chosen by the mayor-elect for assistant secretaries are:

William C. S. Healey, former city councillor, of East Boston, who was on the staff of Former Mayor Andrew J. Peters and editor of the City Record, and Cyril G. Cummings, of Dorchester, a brother-in-law of Congressman John J. Douglass.

OTHER SECRETARIES

Martin J. Conway, 237 Charles st., Boston, was named for messenger; Francis H. Glynn, 714 Adams st., Dorchester, for chauffeur and Margarette E. Nolan, of 58 Lambert ave., Dorchester, for telephone operator.

Mansfield also announced his present secretary, Mary L. Thompson, would be attached to the mayor's office.

Legion's Head Sends Cheer to Vets

Chicago, Dec. 23 (AP)—Edward A. Hayes, national American Legion commander, sent a message of Christmas cheer and encouragement today to disabled veterans of the World War in hospitals throughout the land.

"If that last clear chance of full restoration to health is gone for some of you, do not be discouraged and downcast. After all, life is what each individual makes of it.

"Your burden, your wounds and impaired health constitute the highest living degree of patriotism and citizenship and I have a certain name for those who seem to have forgotten, these 15 years since the World War, the debt of gratitude that all America owes to you."

Sec. Woodin's Own Physician at Side

GARMENTS SENT TO POLICE BY LAUNDRY CLEANSER

a hurried dinner on Christmas Day.

"You'll have time enough to eat, and no more." Flaherty told his men. "There'll be no Christmas with the family unless the killer is captured."

In all, 62 detectives worked with the uniformed force in the man hunt.

Today the broken hearted parents of the slain girl were questioned again. Their home was combed from cellar to attic for letters.

RELIGIOUS ZEALOT THEORY

One police theory is that a religious zealot bludgeoned and knifed to death the pretty high school graduate.

The ferocity of the killing, the strength manifested by the slayer, combined with the folding of the victim's hands on her breast and the straightening out of her legs, all pointed to that type.

The theft of $8.95 from the cash drawer was taken as merely a cunning afterthought to throw suspicion on a possible holdup man.

Another evidence of the shrewdness which frequently accompanies dementia, was the fact that fingerprints were wiped completely from the handles of the two bread-knives used by the murderer. Also the blunt instrument with which Miss Zuckerman's face was smashed was taken away.

A holdup killer of the type who would rob a small South End bakery, it was pointed out, would in all probability have fled after delivering one blow at the clerk.

According to experts, he certainly would not have used three weapons, and then remained long enough to arrange the body on the floor, with the constant possibility of being seen.

All this was done quietly and with dispatch in a period of less than 10 minutes, investigation has revealed.

TOPCOAT WORN

The slayer is believed to be a strongly-built man, about five feet seven inches in height and wears a light topcoat. A man of this description was seen stepping out of the bakery by three witnesses a few minutes before the crime was discovered.

"We want to find this man," said Capt. James R. Claflin of the Warren ave. police station. "It was a strong person who killed the girl and he was a perfect marksman, for his blows never missed her."

It is thought he may be an acquaintance of the Zuckerman family.

As police reconstruct the crime, Ethel Zuckerman, young, ambitious and apparently without an enemy, was standing behind the counter on the right of the store when the murderer entered. Outside wind-driven rain beat at the windows. It was shortly after 10 o'clock, near the hour of closing, and because of the storm there were few passersby.

Police believe the slayer may have been known to the girl, but whether he was or not she made no outcry that was heard. Apparently he made some move that caused her to run to the pay-station telephone that hung on the open wall near the end of the counter.

Evidently Ethel reached the telephone, police said, and was there struck a blow in the face so violent that it broke virtually every bone, and crushed the nose on the instrument. Then the slayer apparently seized a long breadknife from the counter, striking the girl with it on the forehead. The blade turned on the frontal skullbone, and slashed the skin.

THROAT STABBED

Ethel fell to the floor and her assailant seized the second knife and, with vicious strength drove it through her throat, pinning her to the floor.

Then with unhurried care he wiped off the handles of the knives, folded his victim's hands on her breast, straightened out her legs which had twisted when she crumpled to the floor and stepped into the night.

The religious fanatic theory was taken up after Dominic Foti, 32, of 43 Wall st., West End, known to the slain girl as "Dick Brown," had been eliminated from the case.

"We are satisfied," said Capt. Claflin, "that Foti had nothing to do with her death."

SUITOR SADDENED

"There were discrepancies in his story, but we checked them and they straightened themselves out without explanation from him. He was questioned for 17 hours and 45 minutes.

"Personally I believe he feels as bad over the girl' death as her own father and mother. After talking with him that great length of time I'm personally satisfied he knows nothing about her murder."

As Foti left the Warren ave. station last night, he said to Capt. Claflin:

"If you want me at any time I will be at my home or my mother will know where I am."

To a reporter he stated:

"I want to say that Capt. Claflin and all other police used me as fairly as possible. There were times when I felt they were trying to trip me. I know, however, that was their job and I have nothing against them. They kept me here for 24 hours but I want to say Capt. Claflin treated me like a gentleman and was courteous to me in every respect."

PHRASE REPEATED

During the long interrogation by Commissioner Hultman, Atty. Leo Schwartz and 12 detectives, Foti was asked over and over again to repeat a phrase which Edward Maloof, 16, of 315 Harrison ave., heard a man use to Ethel Zuckerman during an argument in the store.

The West End youth also was required many times to put on and take off a light topcoat which he owns and which he said, he had not worn for three months, since he stopped seeing Ethel.

Wearing the coat he was taken to the Harrison ave. bakery and required to step out of the store for the benefit of three witnesses who saw the mystery man leaving just before the killing was discovered. All the witnesses said Foti, who is short and slight, was not the man.

OTHERS RELEASED

Shortly after Foti was released Capt. Claflin said:

"We are right back where we started from."

He admitted, however, a search was on for the man wearing a light topcoat, whose build as described by witnesses would connote sufficient strength to commit the crime.

The funeral of the slain girl was held at Anshi Poland synagogue, on Oswego st., South End, not far from the Harrison ave. bakery where Ethel was killed.

In the presence of her parents, who were on the point of collapse, Rabbi E. Wise conducted brief services, and the body was interred in Beth Israel Cemetery, Everett.

SANTA REMEMBERS HORSES

This is the Motor Age and it isn't very often that Old Dobbin is remembered. But at this Christmas season, the S. P. C. A. did not forget. Trucks loaded with oats, corn, carrots and apples—and Yule trees, too—provided a Horses' Christmas in Haymarket and India squares. Mrs. Louis Murphy, of Riverway, played Santa in the former place. It was, she said, a Merry Christmas. (Boston American Photo.)

Mail Truck Blaze Probed at Christmas Peak

Postal inspectors today began an investigation into the cause of a fire that last night destroyed hundreds of Christmas gifts on a mail truck in the Back Bay.

As big crowd saw the blaze at Ipswich and Boylston sts. and watched postal employes shovel up the charred remains of gay gifts and Christmas food packages destined for New Bedford, Brockton, Fall River and other communities in the southeastern part of the state.

Lawrence Osborne of Brighton, who was driving the truck from the Burlington postal station to South Station, said he was unaware of the fire until a passing motorist hailed him.

Then, he said, he stopped his truck and jumped out. The entire midsection was aflame. He ran to the nearest fire alarm box and then began to pull mail sacks out of the truck. Firemen soon arrived to put out the blaze.

The mishap to the truck came at the very peak of Boston's busiest postal season in years. All employes of the department, substitutes as well as regulars, worked from 15 to 16 hours on Thursday and Friday in an effort to move the great rush of Christmas mail. Postmaster William G. Hurley said.

And they will probably put in another double day today in an effort to get the last Yule card delivered before nightfall. There will be no deliveries Sunday or Monday, except in the case of special delivery mail.

Postal clerks at the South Station set up a new record when they handled more than 1,000,000 pieces of heavy mail—other than parcels—in a single day.

Postmaster Hurley announced that two or three substitute workers would be assigned to every postal delivery truck today in an effort to get gift packages out of the postoffice and into the homes by Christmas.

LEAK SEEN IN SILVER MOVE

Washington, Dec. 23 (INS)—Belief that a mysterious spy and "tip-off man" is betraying closely-guarded secrets of the Roosevelt administration, to the profit of international speculators, grew today in congressional circles as charges accumulated that a "leak" occurred in announcement of the President's silver-buying program.

Senator Thomas (Dem.) of Oklahoma urged immediate investigation into the charges be launched by the White House.

Thomas revealed the Washington manager for a New York brokerage house called him on the phone at midnight Sunday to say "There is something big in silver on tap" and to seek detailed information, which was not forthcoming.

A Spokane, Wash., resident declared in a telegram to the Senator that brokers were informed regarding the executive order, and the new price for silver, several hours before the official announcement.

The brokers called their customers urging them to "buy silver" and made a big clean-up," the telegram stated.

TRUCK'S DRIVER IS IDENTIFIED

Pittsfield, Dec. 23 (INS)—The victim of the blazing liquor-laden truck, which roared down Lebanon Mountain and plunged down a 150 foot embankment, was identified today as Eddie Davis, of Cleveland.

Identification was made by Michael J. Buros, also of Cleveland, brother-in-law of Jacob A. Rosenstein, driver of the truck, who is in critical condition.

According to Buros, Rosenstein and Davis left Cleveland a week ago with a load of machinery for New York. From there, they took another load to Boston. There a stranger engaged them to take a load of supposed machinery over the New York line, Buros said.

The stranger was a third man on the truck, but he leaped as it caught fire, and has not been seen since. The truck contained $6000 worth of liquor.

$71,169 Given to Lowell

Lowell, Dec. 23—Mayor Slowey turned over checks totaling $71,169.73 to City Treasurer Abel R. Campbell yesterday for the general treasury. The money was received from the state as the city's share of corporation taxes. One check was for $46,495.26 and the other for $24,671.47.

"Col. Jack" Crone's Condition Better

Newburyport, Dec. 23—The condition of John Crone, Elm st., Salisbury, who was stricken with a heart attack while working on a CWA project at Carr's Island bird sanctuary, was reported much improved at the Anna Jaques Hospital today.

Known as "Col. Jack," he gained considerable fame a few years ago when he started a wheelbarrow tour of the United States.

Mary Has Rubber Plant for Xmas Tree

Rotisserie Turkey Is to Be Served in Dressing Room

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—Christmas dinner in a stage dressing room, with a rubber plant for a Christmas tree, that will be Mary Pickford's Christmas this year.

But she's determined to enjoy it, she said today at the Broadway motion picture house where she returned to the stage after 18 years.

It was her first stage appearance since she was Juliet, in David Belasco's "Good Little Devil," and she found it a bit strange—especially the big house, and the "five-a-day" schedule, which will keep her in the theater for Christmas dinner.

As she told of dinner plans her voice was a trifle unsteady, but her courage was high.

They will send out to a rotisserie for a turkey—she met her sister, her secretary and her niece.

And then? "Why, we'll eat it," she said.

It all will be quite different from the customary Christmas at Pickfair. There was always a houseful of guests—18 or 20 for dinner in the white and green dining room.

Last Christmas, Mary recalled, "Douglas, Jr.," and Joan Crawford —now separated—were there; and Gary Cooper had given a party for "Mr. Fairbanks" the night before.

"But," she broke off suddenly, "I really don't remember what kind of Christmas we had last year."

For her stage appearances, she wears a simple office dress. Between acts she rests, a somewhat disconsolate little figure in orange pajamas.

It had been rumored that during the holidays Miss Pickford would see a famous "spirit" medium. This she denied.

"I've never been to a seance, nor have I been psychoanalyzed," she said.

"But," she added laughingly, "it might not be a bad idea. I'd try to find out ..."

She broke off without ending the sentence.

America's Sweetheart' to Have 'Different' Yuletide

GOLD PACT NOW HOPED FOR BY ROOSEVELT

U. S. Experts Draft Rules for Buying of Silver on Tuesday

Washington, Dec. 23 (INS)—President Roosevelt ordered full speed ahead today in putting his silver program into physical operation, after revealing he hoped some day for an international agreement on gold.

The President has been asked by Senator Thomas (D) of Oklahoma, to study a proposal for nationalizing the yellow metal, and has promised a bill to Atty.-Gen. Cummings for an opinion.

An eight-hour closed conference between the Federal Reserve Board and Eastrn Federal Reserve Governors brought excited discussion. Among the subjects reported discussed was a "50-cent" dollar, along with Thomas' plan for nationalization of gold.

Under Thomas' plan the government rather than the Federal Reserve banks would obtain the profit from any revaluation of gold.

If the gold were called into the Treasury and the government then stabilized it around 50 cents, it would be able to almost double the currency based on the gold and thus make a profit estimated at around $4,000,000,000.

The silver program, under which the Trasury will, in effect, pay $4.5 cents an ounce for newly-mined, domestic silver, will swing into actual operation by Tuesday, under the orders of Mr. Roosevelt. Treasury experts worked furiously today drafting the necessary regulations to put the plan into action.

ROSENWALD AS PLOT TARGET FOR $30,000

Threat to Millionaire Merchant Leads to Man's Arrest

Philadelphia, Dec. 23 (INS) — William J. Schultze, 34, was arrested today on charges of threatening bodily harm and attempting to extort $30,000 from Lessing J. Rosenwald, wealthy merchant and philanthropist. He was held in $10,000 bail for the grand jury.

Rosenwald, who is chairman of Sears, Roebuck and Company, and a detective who arrested Schultze, were the only witnesses at the police court trial.

It was the second extortion plot against the wealthy philanthropist in recent months.

After his arrest, Schultze, who is married, was questioned at detective headquarters for a short time and later was taken to an unannounced destination.

At his home after a conference at city hall with detectives, Rosenwald said he received a letter demanding the money about 10 days ago.

"It demanded money and threatened me if I refused to deliver it," Rosenwald added.

"He (the writer) told me to leave it at Olney avenue and American street where this fellow was arrested."

Stating several other letters were received with instructions as to where the money should be placed and the denominations desired, Rosenwald said they were evidently the work of an amateur.

"However, they were very vague as to the type of injury which would be inflicted if I failed to pay," Rosenwald said.

"The letters were so apparently the work of an amateur that I can't say I worried a great deal about them. They had all the earmarks of a brainstorm."

Last April, Rosenwald received similar letters and his co-operation with police in the case resulted in the arrest of Charles Weil, 29-year-old bookkeeper, who had demanded $100,000.

Weil was captured in a cigar store telephone booth while talking to Rosenwald. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to seven and a half years in the penitentiary.

Rockefeller, Sr., is confined to his bed, but for three days he has been able to sit up and talk and joke with members of his family who are gathering at Pocantico Hills, his estate near Tarrytown, for Christmas, Universal Service learned today from a person close to the family.

Monday will bring the first large gathering of members of the Rockefeller clan at Christmas time in 15 years, or since the 93-year-old financier started spending winters in Florida. There will be sons, daughters, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

His principal pleasures are receiving visits from his family and having newspapers or magazines read to him.

YOUTH IS SHOT BY OFFICER

A South Boston youth, allegedly attempting to steal a new sedan in East Broadway early today, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded by a police sergeant.

A companion, said by police also to be a South Boston youth, escaped.

The wounded youth is Walter Fleming, 20, of Silver st., South Boston. He is in a grave condition with a bullet wound in his neck.

He was shot by Sergt. James A. Culleton, who was making a tour of duty in South Boston with Sergt. John H. Malloy.

They said the pair approached the new sedan, parked in East Broadway, looked up and down the street and then ducked into the machine.

Sergt. Culleton fired one shot in the air. The suspect leaped from the car and started to run.

Culleton said one of the fugitives drew a gun and that he then fired his own weapon, wounding Donovan.

LIQUOR TAX TO FINANCE HUGE BOND ISSUE

Interest and Sinking Fund Are to Come Out of Revenue

Washington, Dec. 23 (INS)—A policy of using liquor taxation to finance the huge relief bond issues expected to the Roosevelt administration, including more than $3,000,000,000 expected to be authorized next winter—has been adopted by Democratic fiscal leaders of the House.

Under this program liquor users will pay interest on bonds and provide a sinking fund to pay them off in 20 years.

The policy furthers the "sound financing" program announced by the administration when it asked Congress for the $3,300,000,000 public works bond issue last winter.

On demand of the administration, Congress voted $227,000,000 in taxes to amortize the bonds and pay interest on them. The action was necessary, the treasury declared, to safeguard the government's credit.

Congressional leaders have been informed that additional outlays of over $3,000,000,000 for the public Works Administration, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Civil Works Administration and Direct Relief will be recommended by the President.

The liquor tax is designed not only to replace virtually all of the $227,000,000 taxes, which were to be ended with repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, but to finance service charges on the next authorizations.

The $3 a gallon tax on hard liquor is estimated by the committee to yield $300,000,000, with $75,000,000 to be obtained from import duties and $15,000,000 from wines and license fees, a total of $390,000,000.

House fiscal affairs leaders estimate the liquor tax will not only replace the taxes automatically repealed, but will virtually finance the second bond issue. Any additional amount needed is expected to be provided by plugging up loopholes in the present tax laws.

DRYS ARE MADE 'REVENUERS'

Robert J. Coyne, in charge of the unit of beverage investigation at the Federal Building, today received word from John F. Hurley, assistant director of investigation in the Department of Justice, that hereafter he and the 15 men under him will act as deputy collectors of internal revenue.

Up to Repeal Coyne and his force operated as dry agents in the enforcement of Prohibition. In their new position, Coyne and his men will checkup on all bootleggers and rum smugglers and ascertain if they have paid revenue tax on spirits.

JAPAN JOYFULLY CELEBRATES ROYAL 'BLESSED EVENT'

MIKADO ORDERS AMNESTY AS HEIR IS BORN

Stock Market Booms in Honor of Long-Hoped-for Arrival

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Tokio, Dec. 23 (INS)—The greatest celebration in Japanese history was staged throughout the country today in honor of the birth of an heir to the Japanese throne, the oldest dynasty in the world.

The new prince, a seven-pound three-ounce infant, is regarded by 100,000,000 imperial subjects as a direct descendant of the Sun Goddess. The baby, officially masured, was one foot seven and three-quarters inches long.

Disappointed four times previously when the Empress Nagako gave birth to daughters, who cannot succeed to the throne, Emperor Hirohito and his subject, each in his own way, gave way to unbounded rejoicing at this long-awaited event.

The Emperor will grant widespread amnesty to prisoners, particularly those guilty of political offenses. All awaiting execution, regardless of their crimes, are expected to have their sentences commuted to life imprisonment. Reductions of all prison terms are expected.

The Emperor also announced he would make large donations to orphans' homes, schools and patriotic societies. Honors will be conferred extensively in recognition of the great event.

The public, kept informed of every detail by radio bulletins every few minutes, was buoyant as it never has been before. Huge, colorful parades were held in every city, town and village in the country.

Stocks soared on the Tokio market, booming upward for an average gain of 3 points. The national rejoicing was reflected in every phase of Japanese life.

CHRISTENING DEC. 29

The Empress was doing well and the princeling was described as a healthy baby, whose first lusty cries were all that could be desired.

The young heir will be named on the 29th, it was announced, in an elaborate ceremony in a special inner chamber of the Chiyoda palace. The name will be chosen after lengthy consultation and many suggestions, both from the Emperor and his household, and after referring to old Chinese and Japanese books. The child is destined to be the 125th Emperor of Japan.

The child was born at 6:37 a. m. today. Shortly before 8 o'clock the Emperor saw his son for the first time, and immediately afterward he visited the Empress. Following the visit of their father, the three little imperial daughters, the Princesses Teru, Taka, and Yori toddled in to see their new brother.

MOTHER TO NURSE HIM

It was understood the princeling would be nursed by the Empress most of the time, although two wet nurses will alternate in feeding during the night.

The little imperial baby was born in the maternity cottage removed from the Imperial palace. Enclosed by a three-sided paper screen, Empress Nagako occupied a specially purified couch.

At the beck of surgeons were seven wet-nurses selected from the noblest families of the country. They have been purified for days.

Diplomatic corps and all court attendants have been in formal dress for days for the purpose of appearing before Japan's sovereign to extend congratulations.

INFANT GIVEN SWORD

One of the foremost was the presentation of a white-sheathed sword, 10 inches long, to the newborn infant by Grand Chamberlain Suzuki at the command of Emperor Hirohito. It is one of the oldest of Japanese traditions, the purpose of the sword being to drive away evil spirits.

This particular sword, as were those presented to the other children of the Emperor, was made by Sadagatsu Gwassan, of Osaka, considered by the Japanese the greatest living swordsmith. He worked upon the sword for a full month after first purifying his studio, which he inherited from his father, and daily purifying himself.

Perhaps the most interesting of various ceremonies which will be observed at the palace in the next few days will be that of shooting arrows into the air from six bows to drive away evil spirits. This will take place the seventh evening

A Boy! Empress and Princesses Rejoice

When a boy was born to the Empress Nagako, consort of Japan's emperor, today, these little princesses regarded the event much as children in other less regal homes would—as the arrival of an interesting brother. The empress, reported well after the birth, received the emperor shortly after the next mikado was born, and shortly afterward the three princesses, two of whom are pictured, were shown their little brother.

CHRISTMAS, AND ALONE, WOMAN TAKES POISON

New Haven Drug Victim May Come From Boston

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 23 (INS)—Grace Hospital physicians today fought to save the life of a woman who may be from Boston who swallowed an unknown drug at a hotel here.

The woman was found in a room she had engaged Wednesday under the name of "Mrs. T. M. Bronson, of 48 West End Ave., New York." Hotel physicians, hastily summoned, reported she had swallowed a heavy dose of some powerful drug.

No identifying marks were found among her possessions. New York police reported the address evidently false. An unaddressed note signed "T. M. B." read:

"Oh, I am so tired, I am hoping I shall sleep the sleep that knows no awakening. I feel as if my brain would burst . . . What an awful thing it is to be alone.

"I forgive everyone who has injured me in any way as I hope for forgiveness from those I have hurt.

"Christmas time, when one should be so happy, and how awful it is for me. In bad health, etc., I do not care what becomes of this shell of mine, for do as you wish with it.

"God forgive me for causing any pain to those that may love me, but it is better so.

Carve the Protein! Tonic Coming Up

By DALE HARRISON

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Department of Health, which is a close student of post-holiday stomachaches, recommends a merry menu for the Yule.

Substantially as follows:

SECOND COURSE

Gastric stimulant. (Bouillon to you).

THIRD COURSE

Protein. (Oh, all right, call it turkey with crumb dressing, cranberry sauce and giblet gravy). Also,

Vitamins of various alphabetical designations, and carbohydrates, and a dash of calcium. (Back in Michigan we always referred to them as creamed onions, glaced sweet potatoes and broccoli).

FOURTH COURSE

Chlorophyll (ah!). The next time you have a craving for mixed salad greens with French dressing, merely ask the waiter for chorophyll and hope for the best.

FIFTH COURSE

Anti-fat, iron and more vitamins. (Holly sherbet, fruit cake, malaga grapes, raisins and salted almonds).

Calories and tonic digestive stimulant. (Cointreau is good, creme de cacao has its merits, but whatever the cordial, it is the department triumphantly notes, "high in calory value."

The department avers that the said meal, from vitamins to calories, or as less scientific persons put it "from soup to nuts," can be served 10 people for $6.30, the cordial kicker being extra.

DOCTOR TREKS ON SNOWSHOES TO INVALID

Braves Blinding Storm to Visit Dying Man on Kearsarge Slope

Wilmot, N. H. Dec. 23—From the slope of snow-swept Mt. Kearsarge today came one more tale to add to the unending saga of the heroism of country doctors.

The story started two nights ago when a light flickered in the window of a house far up on the slope—a light that meant a man was dying. A half-mile down the slope the light was seen by a boy in another house and he immediately headed down the slope to the next house, a half-mile away, to telephone Dr. John Norris, of New London.

LONG TREK BEGINS

A blinding snowstorm had started but Dr. Norris started out on his long trek to the home of Frank Merrill, 73, who lived with his aged wife, half-way up the slope of the mountain.

The doctor strapped on snowshoes, having become expert in their use while he was student at Meriill University a few years ago, and started on the trip, carrying his medicine kit in his hand.

After hours of struggle through the drifts he finally reached the farmhouse. His patient, however, was slowly sinking and all the doctor could do was make him comfortable. He left two hours after midnight and a short time later Merrill died.

DRIFTS ARE CUT

The following day the doctor notified an undertaker and a hearse traveled up the slope to bring down the aged farmer's body. The trip was successful although at times a passage had to be cut through the deep drifts of snow.

Dr. Norris had been treating Merrill for more than a week, making the 14-mile trip from New London to the Merrill home each day.

In the daytime neighbors helped Mrs. Merrill and each night they watched for the light which meant a hurry call for the doctor.

SIX HELD AFTER BACK BAY RIDE

A wild chase through the Back Bay and West End, in which a car driven by an alleged drunken operator collided with two other machines today, with two headquarters detectives narrowly escaping injury, resulted in the arrest of six persons.

Felix Barletta, 26, of 33 New st., East Boston, said by police to have been operator of the machine, was arrested and will be charged with drunken driving.

Five companions riding in the car with him were also taken into custody.

Others arrested gave their names as Joseph A. Bodanza, 26, Liverpool st.; William D. Lorenza, 26, Maverick st.; Ralph Lewis, 25, London st.; John J. Ferrulo, 27, Antrim st., and George Repucci, Meridian st., all East Boston.

The headquarters detectives, John Hancotte and John McDonald, were riding in a police machine at Boylston and Clarendon sts., when their car was struck by the machine containing the six men.

GUSTIN STILL DODGES POLICE

Police admit they are again baffled over the whereabouts of Steve "Gustin" Wallace, who was acquitted Thursday morning of assault on Patrolman Daniel J. McDonald, only to be indicted on a new charge.

The "little home in Columbia rd.," to which Atty. Daniel J. Gallagher tearfully pleaded that the jury send Wallace, has not seen him as far as police could learn.

His disappearance has given police and prosecuting authorities another opportunity to engage in responsibility-dodging contest. Both declared they could not be held responsible for permitting Wallace to get away, although indicted for conspiracy to kill, murder and assault McDonald.

According to police, Mrs. King was found, unconscious, in the front hallway on the first floor of her rooming house. She occupies the fourth floor. She was found by Michael Avelino, of Franklin st., Stoneham.

'Near Heaven' Marriage Ends in Divorce

Mrs. Fred Kehoe is farther away from heaven today than ever, for she has just won a divorce in Worcester from her husband, whom she married on top of Mt. Washington in New Hampshire in August, so that they "could be as near to heaven as possible." Cruel and abusive treatment was the divorce grounds.

Mrs. Kehoe lives on Florence st., Worcester, and her husband, a retired farmer, has returned to his home in Rutland, Vt. They are both past 60.

One of Kehoe's "cruel acts" consisted of keeping her a prisoner in their Chicago hotel room, whither they had gone for their honeymoon and to see the World's Fair.

Kehoe has a complaint of his own to make. His wife tried to inject too much romance into their wedding. She compelled him to wait three days at the foot of the mountain until the weather was suitable for the trip to the lofty altar, he claims. Previously she had figured in two shipwrecks and Kehoe was husband No. 3.

Lynn Youth Drops Dead in His Home

Milton Bogard, 20, of 11 Union ct., Lynn, died suddenly in his room today of heart disease. Other occupants of the house heard him fall to the floor and called a physician, but the latter was unable to revive him.

HOLDUP LINKED TO BANK JOBS

Police today placed the $13,5?? holdup and payroll robbery of the treasurer of the Trimount Clothing Co., Station st., Roxbury, at the door of the same trio involved in recent bank robberies in Brookline, Wollaston and North Easton.

Officials pointed out that in each of the bank robberies the principal weapon used by the bandits was a sawed-off shotgun and this gun was wielded as usual by a tall bandit in yesterday's holdup.

Police also declared yesterday's holdup was marked by the same precision and finesse shown in the holdup of the Brookline Trust Co. last Oct. 2; the Wollaston branch of the Quincy Trust Co. on Dec. 2, and the Easton First National Bank at North Easton, last Nov. 10.

Cardiff Remembers Window Washer

The good old housewives of Cardiff, Wales, didn't forget Boston's promoter of the "World Federation of Municipalities," who is Window Washer William A. Ryan of Dorchester. Under the direction of Lord Mayor A. E. Gough, says Mr. Ryan, the ladies cooked a Christmas pudding. Ryan got the pudding today.

He has achieved some fame for his lone effort to band the cities of the world into a federation that would promote peace. He has received letters from dignitaries all over the world who were impressed by the Ryan stationary and his semi-official tone.

CURLEY GIVES YULE BASKETS

Christmas baskets with an eight-pound turkey and a generous assortment of "fixings" in each went today as gifts of Mayor Curley and health department workers to 350 needy residents of the city who had appealed to the mayor personally for aid.

Employes of the health department contributed $700. Mayor Curley added $350 of his own cash.

Distribution of the baskets was made by trucks and drivers also presented each recipient with an engraved card extending the holiday compliments of the city of Boston.

EVIDENCE ENDS IN BEACON CASE

Evidence was completed today at a hearing before Master James C. Reilly to fix damages for minority stockholders in their $1,000,000 suit against Beacon Participations, Inc., directors.

Arguments will be made on Jan. 7. At the close of the hearing Reilly and all of the attorneys viewed the Beacon Trust Building on Milk st. The construction price, market value and revenue of this building has figured prominently in testimony.

The only witness today was Gardner Poole, of South Sudbury, one of the defendant directors from May, 1928 until July, 1932.

He testified he first heard of the $520,000 note, the value of which has been a major contention, at a directors' meeting on June 21, 1928. The note was purchased from Beacon Trust by Beacon Participations on June 4, 1932.

Asked by Robert T. Bushnell, attorney for minority stockholders, if he approved the purchase of the note and other disputed transactions, Poole said he did.

In reply to a question by Atty. William G. Thompson, for the plaintiffs, Poole said he agreed with George S. Mumford that forced sale of the note, following the stock market crash would have been "disastrous." He said the note was a security in which he had the utmost confidence, despite the fact that it had little if any market value at the present time.

Mysterious Shot Addles Mason Swindle Probe

A new element of mystery was injected today into the "Dr." John Gray Mason swindle inquiry, when the police were notified that a shot had been fired last night at the car of Mrs. Frederick E. Snow of the Back Bay, whose name was listed among the prospective victims of the pseudo-physician.

William T. Francy, a close friend of Mrs. Snow, phoned police headquarters that he was entering the car in the theatrical district when a bullet whizzed past him. He said that he did not know whether the bullet was intended for him, or whether the assailant thought that Mrs. Snow was in the automobile at the time.

"SUCKER LIST" PROBED

He did not explain why he neglected to inform the police of the shooting until today.

Mrs. Snow yesterday visited Dist. Atty. Bishop to say that she did not know Mason, who is held in the East Cambridge jail. State detectives today were busy interviewing some of the women included in the list of 40 found in Mason's possession and believed to constitute actual or prospective victims of his operations.

REMOVE POLICE GUARD

The women's names were listed in a notebook found in the possession of Mason, who is alleged to have attempted to mulct Moses Guiesian, Boston real estate man, and possibly kidnap him.

State detectives in interviewing the women named, will try to learn whether they were merely possibilities, or if they actually have had dealings with Mason, according to Dist. Atty. Bishop of Middlesex County.

The police guard at the home of Guiesian in Chestnut Hill has been removed, with only a police cruising car to watch for a possible attempt to carry out a telephoned threat. Guiesian furnished the authorities with information that led to Mason's arrest.

ATLAS PROBERS WILL REVEAL MYSTERY MAN

(Copyright, 1933, by the Boston Evening American. All Rights Reserved.)

Theodore Baldwin, former Boston broker and fiance of an Arlington girl who was killed in a transport airplane explosion over Indiana last October which claimed seven lives, is the newest figure in the official inquiry into the collapse of Atlas Tack stock, the Boston Evening American learned today.

Baldwin was quizzed by Asst. Atty. Gen. Ambrose V. McCall of New York who is probing the collapse of the stock which dropped after telephone boosting of it from a Back Bay office, in the name of McNeel's Financial Service.

His appearance caused comment in view of his Boston connections, but while McCall gave out nothing regarding what the questioning developed, Baldwin told the Boston Evening American it was a mistake and that he had no part in the promotion of Atlas stock.

Baldwin is now living at Hotel Gotham, New York city. He was in Nevada until recently in connection with various mining properties, and was waiting at Reno for Miss Dorothy Dwyer of Arlington, who was flying west to marry him when she was killed. The airplane was blown apart in mid-air by a time bomb.

Baldwin came east for the funeral and soon afterward left his affairs here and went to New York.

Subpoenas have been issued by McCall for four persons. This is a new departure for him as all previous witnesses had simply been requested by telephone to appear and had complied.

A Boston mystery man, who engineered the ballyhoo on Atlas Tack stock, which rose to a record height before its swift collapse last Saturday, is about to be named by official investigators, according to reports current in financial circles.

The Boston Evening American today came into possession of further information regarding complaints forwarded to various official bodies, including the U. S. Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission, over the pushing of the stock in the name of McNeel's Financial Service of Boston.

A Hillsboro, N. H., man complained of losing $2200 by investing in Atlas Tack after listening to glowing statements made by long distance telephone. In addition, he owns his broker $800.

When he was called by telephone, he had no cash but had good stocks previously purchased on recommendation of McNeel's, and he sold these to buy Atlas. He said he was wiped out in 24 hours.

Another complaint reveals that as late as Tuesday of this week, after disclosures had been made, a man representing himself to be Chauncey Day, president of McNeel's, advised a purchaser, who had sold out in alarm with a huge loss, to buy right back in again.

This "hot tip" telephone service was offered for sale to subscribers to McNeel's Financial Service for the amazingly low price of $1 a month. The telephone calls in most cases cost many times that amount.

LYNN FIREMEN FEEDING 550

Marking the eleventh year in which they have turned all their spare time to aiding unfortunate and destitute families in their community, the fire department members of Lynn today distributed 71 Christmas baskets containing food for approximately 550 persons.

At the same time the fire laddies distributed toys to 400 children. The toys, collected, repaired and painted by the fire fighters between calls, will make happy many a youngster whose Yuletide otherwise would have been a drear affair.

The Christmas work is done by the department numbering only 296 men, headed by a committee composed of the following: Lieut. Ralph H. Field, chairman, Capt. Thomas Whalen and Firemen Thomas Burns, William Ring, John Beane, James Kelleher and George Jeffrey.

U. S. Couple Collapse When Facing Paris Spy Charge

Mrs. Switz Protests Her Innocence of Plot in Paris

MRS. ROBERT SWITZ

Mate Asserts He Had Planned to Trap a New 'Mata Hari'

Paris, Dec. 23 (INS)—Robert Gordon Switz, East Orange, N. J., aviator, collapsed today just before his arraignment on charges of participation in an international spy ring.

Revived with smelling salts and a glass of water, he was half-carried before the bar of justice to face the accusations that he and his 22-year-old wife, a Vassar graduate, had sold French military secrets to an unnamed foreign power.

Switz denied all connection with the alleged espionage. He said he had made five trips here; in 1926, when he studied French at Besancon; in 1927, when he worked for a French aviation company; in 1929, when he studied in Paris, and this year, as a representative of the MacNeel Instrument Corp. at Roosevelt Field, N. Y. He said he was interested in development of apparatus for measuring air currents. He was married May 9, last, in New York city hall.

His wife, the former Marjorie Tilley of New York, arrived in a patrol wagon from the women's prison where she has been held for the last few days.

Mrs. Switz was to be examined later, separated from her husband.

WIFE ALSO COLLAPSES

Earlier in the day Mrs. Switz had suffered a swooning collapse similar to that of her husband.

Confined in a cold, isolated cell on the top floor of the Petite Roquette women's prison, she declared she knew nothing of documents alleged to have been found in the apartment of herself and husband, on which the French police base their case against them.

"If the police found documents in our room, we did not know of their existence," Mrs. Switz said. "We do not know who placed them there."

Switz asked Henri Torres, France's foremost criminal lawyer, to defend him and his wife, continuing to pass up the offered help of American authorities here.

DEFENSE COMPLICATED

Torres accepted the task, reasoning that Mme. Lydia Stahl, "Mata Hari" of the case, who already has engaged him, is accused of espionage in the ministry of marine while the Switzes are alleged to have done their spy work against the ministries of war and air, and that he could handle both cases at the same time.

Some complications were foreseen, however, because Switz was reported framing a defense that he became involved with Mme. Stahl, aware she was active as a spy but that he was attempting to get evidence against her to trap her.

New York, Dec. 23 (INS)—Lydia Tchakaloff Stahl lived anything but a glamorous, romantic life while in New York from 1928 to 1930. The so-called "Mata Hari," rather than being the leading spirit of gay receptions to which she is able to furnish information concerning state secrets, lived quietly.

'PAT' MAGUIRE MAY RECOVER

Oak Park, Ill., Dec. 23 (AP)—Bells, constantly ringing bells—telephone, front door, back door—are complicating busy affairs today in a little yellow house where an anxious family is watching for continued signs of possible returning consciousness in 28-year-old Patricia Maguire, "Pat," now 'to scores of interested persons, a victim. of sleeping sickness for nearly two years.

The constant nursing of the helpless girl, who is now stirred by increasing restlessness, is interrupted incessantly, now that news of her possible improvement has gotten about, by telephone calls.

Friends call to inquire the latest information. Many calls are from strangers to the family.

Fruit and flowers in abundance came to the house. A Christmas tree will sit right outside Pat's door. There are toys to be wrapped, for there's a 10-year-old girl in the house, Rita, Pat's niece.

Boy Sleeps for 796 Days Through 3d Christmas

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 23 (INS)—Santa Claus' merry eyes will peek into many a strange place on his swift rounds Christmas Eve, but perhaps the strangest of them all will be in a Memphis (Tenn.) home, where Joe Higgins, nine, lies peacefully sleeping.

Almost three years ago Joe, a healthy, sprightly lad, was taken down with sleeping sickness.

One Christmas passed, then another. Joe slept on. His mother died. His father was placed in a home, a hopeless cripple. He was adopted by Mrs. S. T. Rider, whose sympathies were aroused by the boy's plight.

Monday, for his third Christmas, Joe will have been unconscious 796 days, the longest period of sleep on record in the United States, physicians said.

But Joe, though asleep, will not be forgotten by Santa.

A tall Christmas tree, glittering with tinsel, gifts heaped about its base, brightens his sick room.

Tonight, the merry laughter of children Joe attended school with before he was struck down, will ring through the house at a Christmas party given for him.

The toys and gifts Santa brings will be carefully laid away until Joe recovers, as Mrs. Rider insists he will eventually.

Brain specialists fear the boy may never again know the joys of the Yuletide.

But Mrs. Rider points confidently to certain signs of approaching recovery. Occasionally the boy moves his arms and legs.

LEXINGTON WET BY WEE MARGIN

Lexington residents were somewhat surprised today to learn that the town had voted "wet" in a special election yesterday, the town being a dry community as far back as any resident can remember.

Little more than one-fourth of the town's quota of 4627 votes were cast. A mere seven votes separated the totals on the question of licensing the sale of hard liquor, those in favor winning, 624 to 617.

The town voted against the tavern plan by a tally of 746 to 467. However, the issuing of licenses for the sale of wines and beer was passed by a vote of 668 to 549.

In his defense Fitch said he did not believe any senator received any money for giving out scholarships.

15,000 TO HAVE YULE BASKET FOOD

Fifteen thousand little children, the sick, the crippled and the aged will go to their beds tonight supremely happy in the thought that Christmas Day will really be Christmas Day for them.

Thomas Maren

For today, beginning long before the first streaks of dawn in the skies, The Boston Evening American began its delivery of thousands of Christmas baskets to the homes of those whose misery has been dispelled—at least for a day—by the great-heartedness of hundreds of Boston's men and women who couldn't face their own Yuletide without the knowledge they had lifted a helping hand to others.

Not the least of these is Thomas Maren, director of the Metropolitan Amusement Co., who handled the huge benefit at the Metropolitan Theater Wednesday night in aid of the basket fund. To him and to the thousands of others who contributed in large measure or small, the Boston Evening American expresses thanks in behalf of those children.

Little tots, many of whom had not had nourishing foods in many weeks could gaze, in awe, at the crammed insides of ice-boxes, to wonder perhaps, how it would feel to always have food in the house like that.

FOOD FOR 3 DAYS

And the baskets. Fine young turkeys, vegetables, canned foods, bread, and, of course, the unforgettable "trimmings." And that wasn't all. The baskets, supervised by the Boston Evening American Fund, were so arranged as to contain enough food for a family of eight for at least three days.

Early morning saw the first of the deliveries being made. Chain-store trucks began carrying the thousands of packages to 65 churches and civic organizations where distribution was to be made.

From these place the baskets were checked to the various addresses of those entitled to them and delivery to the distressed homes started.

HELPERS ARE TIRED

Late last night a small army of tired men and women completed the gigantic task of directing the work. It was found impossible to send a basket to every person who asked one, and so it became necessary to make distribution to those most greatly in distress.

By this method it was learned at least 15,000 children will have their Christmas dinners, many of them, perhaps, their first real ones, with turkey, nourishing soups, potatoes, oranges, peas, corn, string beans, bread, coffee, sugar and hard candy.

And so, those who unselfishly contributed to this great cause, sponsored by the Boston Evening American, will sit down to their own dinners on Christmas Day, secure in the knowledge that, somewhere in Greater Boston, are thousands of mothers and fathers who, with bo ' heads, will say their prayer of thankfulness to Him, on that, the day of His birth, and to those who made their prayers possible.

PHELAN LIGHTS NEW SIGNAL

Thomas F. Phelan, federal building correspondent for the Boston Evening American, and president of the Mt. Pleasant Improvement Association, had the honor of turning on the traffic signal light in front of St. Patrick's Church, Roxbury, at 10:0 a. m. today.

The lights are at Dunmore, Hampden and Dudley sts, scene of two fatal accidents in recent years. Phelan led the fight for the lights.

Chairman Theodore A. Glynn of the board of street commissioners presented Phelan with the key to the lights.

Pontiff's Christmas Message to World

Vatican City, Dec. 23 (AP)—The official text of Pope Pius' Christmas message to the world today follows:

"We hasten to heartily reciprocate to the Sacred College and to the Roman prelates all of the wealth and the cordiality of the good wishes and the felicitations which have been presented to us. And then we recall with you, venerable brothers and most beloved sons, all of that beauty and nobility of things so nobly and affectionately recollected and set forth.

"And truly, we can only thank from the bottom of our souls, together with you, the God of truly greatest good, giver of all perfect good, for so many and many great graces and demonstrations of compassion and generosity toward all of us and especially toward his poor vicar.

YEAR OF REDEMPTION

"In truth, this year has been a year of redemption most just, of redemption recalled and commemorated after 19 centuries, but all renewed redemption, working anew in so many souls and over such a vast scale.

"Truly, we have seen great and good things this holy year, not yet concluded. Inasmuch as there are three more months until the conclusion, it makes us think that that which has happened must continue.

"And now from this moment, with paternal affection, we greet these new pilgrims who are announced their coming and with them we enjoy the gladness that the Divine Goodness is preparing for us in continuation of those already conceded to us in the exultation of so many saints, flowering always anew impressively on the ancient trunk of the Church and who are the fruit, the splendid flower of the men of deemption, the most beautiful companion, the Divine Redeemer, descended from his cross in the glory of the centuries, could prepare as his retinue.

FATHERLY BENEDICTION

"To those things said and all the others that we have in our hearts and we cannot say, we can perhaps add only the fatherly benediction which you await and desire—for that expectation of which the news has also reached us—that great expectation of an important pontifical speech is destined to be disappointed.

"The Pope will not make a speech of either great or little importance; the Pope, however, can and wishes only to talk with his intimates.

"This we can or rather must do, above all as a paternal duty, for one cannot fail to respond to such a filial expectation. But this expectation cannot be to hear what the Pope thinks in the present general and international condition of things.

"It is rather a filial consultation to ask the Pope, the teacher, in the midst of so much talking that is going on what Catholics should think of that which with an ancient wrd is called 'sterilization,' a word which spells experiments already in use in faraway countries and for which there existed in some sense a preparation but which now has been made the subject of legislative dispositions.

REITERATES OPPOSITION

"Objectionable as the subject is, we shall nevertheless speak of it to satisfy that expectation.

"A decree on the subject emanating from the holy office—that congregation of which the Pope is prefect and therefore not in a small way responsible—is still regrettably dating back only to 1931.

"In 1930 the encyclical casiico conubii—that encyclical which, thanks to it, many of the men of good will, has been so well received everywhere and we hope also has been beneficial—was issued.

GARNER WISHES YULE PEACE

The Vice-President is going to hang a cotton sock before the fireplace of his home here and wish for the nation the peace that is his.

The "do not disturb" sign has been hung out since Mr. Garner retired to Uvalde at the end of the last session of Congress.

Not long ago President Roosevelt called him on the telephone, but the homespun Texan had gone fishing with his philosopher friends, Pete Walcott and Ross Brumfield. It was two days before the telephone operators found him in the rear end of a boat.

PILGRIMS HOLD HOLY CITY FETE

Bethlehem, Dec. 23 (AP)—An air of fervent expectancy—devotion mingled with curiosity—gripped today the pilgrims already here for Christmas celebrations which will begin at midnight Sunday.

Intervening time is being spent by devout worshippers and sightseers alike in visiting the traditional sites of events connected with the nativity.

Evasion of Fare Brings 30-Day Term

W. Edwin Grant, 55, of 1200 Commonwealth ave., Allston, has been found guilty by a jury in the fourth session of the Suffolk Superior Court before Judge Frank J. Donahue on the charge of evading a fare by the misuse of a transfer and was sentenced to 30 days in the House of Correction.

POPE ASKS TOLERANCE

position to such measures. He did not mention Germany by name today, but observed that sterilization "has now been entered into legislation."

"Napoleon," the Pope said, "once was asked what was the most necessary factor to wage a good war.

"He replied: 'Money, money and again money.'

"I have a word which can be repeated not only three times but times without number.

"What must we do to attain general concord, harmony and welfare?

"Pray, pray and again pray.

"This is what the Savior said. It is necessary to pray always, to pray relentlessly."

IN ROBES OF STATE

In his white robes of state Pope Pius greeted his cardinals and hundreds of minor prelates in the great Consistory Hall of the Vatican. Seated on his throne, he listened intently while Cardinal Granito, dean of the Sacred College, addressed him on behalf of his colleagues, emphasizing the pontiff's "wonderful and strenuous work" during the Holy Year.

In answering, the Pope first returned the good wishes of his prelate.

"We thank God," he said, "that the Holy Year has meant the atonement of so many souls.

"It is not my wish to deliver a speech, either of importance great or small. I wish only to say a few words on the world situation."

SPEAKS SLOWLY, CLEARLY

The Cardinals, in their robes of scarlet, formed a semi-circle around the Pope's throne, while prelates of lesser rank stood behind them as the Pontiff spoke.

Despite his 77 years and the arduous labors attendant upon celebrating the Holy Year, His Holiness appeared in good health and spirits.

As usual, he spoke slowly, clearly and with genuine feeling. No previous intimation of the nature of his Christmas address had been given to the members of the Curia, and all listened in reverent silence.

The Pope voiced desperation and impatience over the vacillation and indecision of men without wisdom, and alluded particularly to politicians and statesmen who are in high places but without the knowledge and ability to lead the world to a better plane.

The burden of his entire address was prayer, and he exhorted all who heard him to accept this word as the dictate of modern life and relations between men.

"I recall," he said, "the example of a noted financier who was approached for his opinion on the financial situation.

"He replied that he had no opinion. He was then asked what he thought.

"He replied that he did not think.

"So might I say nothing regarding the world situation, for there is no man who can say anything different from that which has been said.

"But when one is to consider the uncertainty of peoples which prevails today and the gigantic mass interests involved in this new history of mankind, which is made up of contrasts and conflicts and contradictions, then I must say one word which is really appropriate.

PEACE TO ALL, HIS GOAL

"And that word is prayer. The words that derive merely from human wisdom, human efforts and even human generosity in these times seem utterly inadequate and groundless.

"Then to pray is what I exhort you to do, for man has said too many useless words already."

The Pontiff then extended his blessing to those gathered in the great hall, and his mind harked back again to his chief goal, peace of all the world.

He recalled the philosophy of Napoleon and the might and strength and glory of arms.

"My prayer," he said, "is that God will destroy those who wish war."

PLEA FOR TOLERANCE

At the conclusion of his blessing, the Pope made a dry reference to financiers "and others unlikely to pray," and expressed the fervent hope that they would wishing so might be deterred by Napoleon's observation that money is the chief requirement.

The informality of the pope's address was in sharp contrast to the solemnity of his address last Christmas, when he discoursed at length on the troubles besetting the world and pleaded for religious tolerance and charity.

The Pope will say three masses Christmas morning in the sechsion of his own apartment, only intimate members of the Vatican household being present.

At noone, he will receive his sister, sister-in-law and his nephew and niece for half an hour, but will take all his meals on Sunday and Christmas Day alone.

CAMPBELL WAR WITH CURLEY JUST A DUD

What appeared to be the beginning of war between Mayor Curley and Clerk Francis A. Campbell, of Superior court, because of the latter's action in stopping payment on $1,000,000 land damage agreements, turned into a sham battle today.

Campbell issued a typewritten statement that he had looked up the law, found that he did not possess the power to halt payment, and therefore would comply at once with the court order.

DENOUNCED BY SILVERMAN

Before announcing that he was changing his opinion "in compliance with the statute," Campbell was soundly denounced by Corp. Counsel Samuel Silverman.

"He ought to mind his own business," he said. "I can't see what power or justification he has. In fact, he has no authority at all. Since when has the clerk of court been given the power to keep two parties from settling their differences?"

Mayor Curley's comment was. "I do not believe the courts will permit Campbell or anyone else to make a political football of the courts. The matter will be determined in a legal way, rather than on political grounds, and I am sure that Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman will take cognizance of Mr. Campbell's order tomorrow morning.

TUNNEL DEALS HIT

"When the courts are used as a political football they become a menace to the entire people, and I do not believe anything of that kind will be tolerated by the judges."

The order of Clerk Campbell applied not only in land damage settlements that have been agreed upon, including $320,530 in connection with the East Boston traffic tunnel, but also to further agreements.

treasure together for the last days."

Those four verses by James, one of the Apostles, said to be of the family of Christ, and put to death, according to Josephus, by the high priest Ananias, are not exactly what you might call anti-revolutionary." They make Karl Marx and Lenin sound like members of the Union League Club.

To millions in America this Christmas means three holidays in succession, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, time enough for a real holiday, and to contemplate the world at leisure.

The "Saturday off," that depression has forced in many industries, may become a permanent institution after full prosperity returns, and again the old saying, "There is some good in all evil," will be justified.

The President wisely decided to make good, shiny, genuine heavy silver part of our money system, and for a start will buy 24,000,000 ounces per year.

Silver goes up, stocks go up, everybody seems happy, except the incurable gold bug. You cannot make him happy, anyhow.

Silver, for thousands of years practically the only money used in the world, is as good, in proportion to its rarity, as gold, certainly a great deal better than paper, and should be coined as freely as gold was ever coined. And this, remember, is the silver producing nation. Gold is a British specialty.

As one reader points out, silver money would discourage bank robbers, for they couldn't carry enough to be worth the risk. Fifty thousand dollars in silver would weigh more than a ton and a half. The strongest bank robber could not carry more than 200 pounds.

And silver seems like real money.

Asiatic workers, when they get gold coin or banknotes, run to change it into silver, rupees in India, taels in China, and then feel that they have real money.

C. J. Israel, 83-year-old Civil War veteran, decided that he had lived long enough and would look for a bette. place. He was not poor, simply disappointed in life. Before shooting himself, the old man gave a Christmas dinner to more than one hundred children in Mexico ell, Neb., and sent a box of candy to every child in the village.

Suicide is a very serious sin, but the Angel Gabriel, after he had written down "dinners for hundred children, candy for all children," must have hesitated to write "suicide."

Perhaps both items were scratched off and the life-weary old man will find a new, happy beginning in the life that lasts forever.

The airplane in which Col. Lindbergh has traveled with his wife 30,000 miles, touching three continents, goes in New York's Museum of Natural History.

Crowds of 1934 will look at it in awe, as a marvellous proof of progress.

Crowds of 2034 will look at it as today's crowds look at the first locomotive and wonder "how anybody dared to fly in such a thing." However, not time or mechanical improvements will do away with the fact that Lindbergh made the first non-stop flight between New York and Paris.

Young ladies were arrested in New Orleans for "fan dancing" and what the police call "indecency." Thirty-seven men looking on were charged with "loitering." Why the more police charge?

The so-called "fan dance" disgraces the dancer, the spectators and the promoters, but it proves the importance of clothing.

Without any fans the women would have been quite uninteresting, even to the 37 "loiterers."

Police Forced to Act on Carroll's Claim That 'Sunny' Was Slain

READ THIS FIRST

Police Officer Dickey Carroll had made two indiscreet arrests. Therefore, when he saw a stranger on the exclusive Paige estate at 2 o'clock in the morning, he hesitated making an arrest. He did not know that tragedy had invaded the home of Randolph Paige and his young wife, Sonia. Returning from Washington, Ranny found his wife hanging by her silk dress cord from a chandelier in her boudoir. The coroner returns a verdict of suicide. Carroll, disputing the verdict, reports to his superiors about the man he saw, but they attach little importance to this. A reporter named Kay is assigned to the case. Carroll shows him photos of the death scene and calls his attention to the cord's intricate knot.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Has Sergeant Williams had his attention called to this knot?" asked Detective Anderson.

"I think not."

"Well, I can say this much. If I were conducting this investigation, I should want to look further into that knot. I'll be glad to say that to Williams if he phones me. But I shall say it to him and to no one else. I'm not talking now for publication, you understand, Kay?"

I nodded.

"Now I must be off," he added. "I've talked to you too long as it is."

And he grabbed his hat and was gone.

My next call, a half hour later, was upon Dr. Henry Warner in Towson. I was lucky enough to catch him home, and although I had expected to find him anything but affable (for I knew he had been pestered to death), I thought I detected (or imagined I detected) that he was already somewhat depressed and moody—due largely to his poor physical condition, she thought.

"Have you looked at the official pictures—the ones the Coroner ordered taken?"

"Not particularly. I glanced at them. Why?"

I pulled the one of the boudoir from my pocket and handed it to him. "Look at the knot," I said. "I have been informed that it is a bit unusual and is one frequently used by crooks. Do you know anything about that?"

Williams examined it closely, and then, as the rest of us had done, he took out his magnifying glass.

"I think it looks darn funny," he admitted. "I'll admit that we hadn't looked into the knot especially. Who told you that this knot is used by crooks?"

I hesitated, considering the advisability of quoting another police official. Then I decided to be frank with this open-minded officer.

"Inspector Andreson did," I answered. "He's one of my friends of mine and I hate to see a lot of unnecessary publicity started that will hurt him. I'd rather the matter over with him—the Carroll angle of it, I mean."

"What did he say?"

"He said that his remarks were not for publication, but that if you wanted any advice or assistance, he would tell you exactly what he thought if you would telephone him."

The Sergeant's feet came down from the desk with a bang.

"Then that means that he does think there's something in it?"

DECIDE TO DIG DEEP

"That's exactly what he said," I explained. "I don't know what he meant."

"Just what is it that you want me to do?" asked Williams. "In view of this knot, I honestly think myself that the investigation should be continued."

"I think an autopsy would be the first step," I answered. "That may show up something. And it will satisfy Carroll and keep things out of the papers."

"Sure," agreed the Sergeant. "In fact, I think I'd like to have one for my own satisfaction."

"Fine!" I exclaimed. "That will shut Carroll up and yet give my paper a thundering good story. I'll write an account of the mysterious man seen in the lane and give that as a reason for the re-opening of the investigation."

"Good," said Williams. "I'll call Inspector Anderson and he may give me some points. "I'll also start some inquiries about the man at some of the big houses. Maybe we can get a line on the knot, too."

"When can you have the autopsy?"

"Probably not very much before late this afternoon or tonight. I think Mrs. Paige's body is now at an undertaker's establishment in Baltimore. It will have to be brought back here to the Towson morgue. I'll call Dr. Mason and ask him to perform it. Probably will want Dr. Warner and maybe a couple of other physicians. Then he can hold an inquest, if he decides, and we will abide by the result of that."

"Bully!" I said with enthusiasm. "Sergeant, you've been mighty fine about this. I can't tell you how much I appreciate the attitude you are taking. I'll not forget it."

We shook hands warmly and I beat it back for the newspaper.

Reynolds was awaiting me with not a little impatience, for this threatened to be a big story.

"What did you find out?" he asked.

"Well, I've found out that the knot is a bit unusual. Seems to be a favorite in the underworld, so to say. And Anderson feels that perhaps the knot justifies a little more investigating, although the Baltimore office isn't connected with the case in any way unless they are requested to take it up. And I've persuaded the Towson police to hold an autopsy."

"Good work," said Reynolds approvingly. "That's real stuff. Suppose we get out an extra now and you'll cover the autopsy—tonight, is it?"

I nodded and went back to my desk.

But before starting my story, I remembered my promise to Carroll and gave him a call. I got him without trouble and told him of the new developments. His pleasure was contagious.

"I was certain of it," he cried. "I just knew she had been killed. Now things are going to start happening—you just wait, 'em!"

(As a matter of fact, things were about to start—so fast and so furiously—that for the next week I was scarcely to eat or sleep.)

BIG STORY BREAKS

For a few minutes I sat quietly at my desk thinking—my last quiet moments before starting in upon a case whose ramifications were so strange and so sensational that they made it the most dramatic crime I have ever investigated.

Then I looked at my two pictures—at the lovely prostrate body of Sonia Paige—and then at her horrible distorted face—and then I began to write.

The shadows of night were falling when I had finished and we were holding our presses for an extra 20 minutes, just so the Herald men could put their paper to bed and go safely home.

I told the whole story of Patrolman Carroll's mystery man in the lane and the determination of the Towson police to continue the case by holding an autopsy that same evening. We published the picture of the boudoir with a close-up of the strange knot. And we requested that anyone who could throw any light on the two o'clock visitor in the Paige lane or who had any information concerning the particular variety of knot, particularly with reference to any knowledge Mrs. Paige might have had of it, should communicate with the paper at once.

And so as night fell all of Baltimore was agog with the latest developments in the Paige case.

"Murder-murder!" were the words that people said to one another in the streets. "Is it possible that Mrs. Paige was murdered?"

The autopsy was held very quietly that night at eight o'clock by Coroner Mason, assisted by Dr. Warner and Drs. James A. Pitt and Wallace H. Deering of Baltimore.

And it showed up one of the most extraordinary deaths in the whole history of Maryland criminology.

It had almost been completed without disclosing any new evidence, when Dr. Warner, doubtless thinking along the line he had suggested to me, opened the mouth and began an examination of the interior of the throat.

There, caught into the teeth and even under the tongue itself, were a number of little silk threads—yellow silk threads, at that.

"Gagged!" cried Dr. Warner and Dr. Mason in the same breath. "Gagged with the tassel of the silk cord which was used to hang her to the chandelier!"

Then the cord itself was rushed over from headquarters, and there was its tassel, very much bedraggled to be sure, but easy to see that it had indeed been crammed into the unfortunate girl's mouth as a gag.

KILLED, THEN HANGED

"She was strangled by this tassel first—suffocated. It was probably wedged well down into the throat and held in place by a bond of some nature. Her heart, in its exhaust of energy, could not stand the strain. And then the murderer strung her up to the chandelier to hide his crime. This is certainly a case of murder, Coroner!"

And murder it was!

A jury was hastily impanelled a few minutes later from among the Towson citizens; and the newsies were shouting their extras on every street corner only an hour later.

For the Coroner's jury found that "Sonia Paige had met her death by strangulation at the hand of a person or persons unknown."

The Paige suicide had ended.

The Great Paige Murder Case had just begun.

Opening Bridge Bid Test of Players Skill

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It is a very human and common tendency among those of us who write on Bridge to confine our discussions to the hands which produce games or Slams or else result in the infliction of stinging penalties. This is natural enough because there is a greater degree of drama in hands of this type, but it is equally essential, if one would be a good Bridge player, to know how to handle a part-score situation and when to stop short of game in the bidding.

Today's hand presents two problems both equally important. One is the choice of an Opening bid and the other is the question of the final contract.

East, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

♢ J 7 6

♢ A Q 9 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

With East's hand players who have been told that a hand containing tenaces should be bid at no-trump would be certain to make the glaring error of opening with that bid. East has four honor-tricks and tenaces or potential tenaces in every suit. Certainly if there is anything in the theory of its being advantageous to get leads up to tenaces in hands in one of which this advantage should be very great. As a matter of fact, usually an Opening bid of one no trump would be the worst conceivable bid. The result of an Opening no-trump bid would be that every player around the table would pass and East would be defeated. With the choice of a spade as an Opening bid, while East and West cannot reach a game contract, they can make a valuable part-score, which is far more profitable than going down to defeat.

The West hand does not contain the playing-tricks for even a shaded Raise and, unpleasant as is the passing of a partner's Opening bid, this is one of the rare cases where prudence dictates that course. For West to raise with his nearly trickless holding, even with adequate trump support, might well result in East playing the hand at an utterly unmakeable contract and also doubled.

TODAY'S QUESTION

♡ A K J 6 5

Spades are trump. Assuming entry cards in both North and South's hands, how should the trump suit be played?

Answer: South should lead the King (or Ace) from his hand, and if the Queen is not played get into North and lead a small one to the Ace-Knave. The finesse should be taken if East plays small.

Symphony Shines in Music of Rimsky-Korsakov

By MOSES SMITH

The program for this week's concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Serge Koussevitzky, has no definite allusion to the holiday season, as is common elsewhere. But many will see something of its spirit in the music of Rimsky-Korsakov, to which the entire program is confined.

The opening number is "Sadko," "the first Russian symphonic poem." Then follows "Night on Mount Triglav," a sort of orchestral suite made out of the music to the third act of the opera-ballet, "Mlada." Our old, but still active, friend, "Scheherazade," completes the program.

The "Mlada" music was in the nature of a novelty, since it had been played only ones previously in Boston, I believe. At first impression it seems rather inferior to the other two works, which are earlier Rimsky-Korsakov. It seemed to have the common faults of works written on commission —among them, frequent plagiarisms on other composers' and on the composer's own other works. In the opening scene as played at yesterday's concert I detected (or thought I did) in rapid succession reminiscences from "Die Walkure," "Tristan and Isolde," and the "Sadko" which had just been heard.

In addition, the music is patently written for the stage, illuminating the action. Without such action, portions are bound to fall flat. Yet there are enough beautiful pages more than to compensate for this. Furthermore, the music, which demands a large orchestra and is not easy to play, was brilliantly presented by Dr. Koussevitzky and his remarkable orchestra. The same thing may be said of the performance of the other two works, which were enthusiastically applauded by the audience.

It was good to hear Rimsky-Korsakov in bulk, like this, in order to realize his orchestral genius, and his tremendous influence on following composers.

When the famous British playwright arrived here aboard the Bremen it was learned that all his huge royalties from Broadway theatrical managers are either spent here or invested in American securities.

Carol Program Well Sung

The New English Singers gave a program of Christmas and other music at Jordan Hall last evening. The concert, which is being repeated this afternoon, was the more pleasurable because the listeners were able to approach closer the intimate setting for which the music was written. Previously the English Singers have appeared here in a large auditorium.

An audience of good size cordially greeted the singers, who devoted three of their seven groups of numbers to carols. In addition there were delightful madrigals and concerted numbers, folk-songs of the Appalachian mountains and airs. The music varied from the 16th century to our own time.

In response to the applause of the audience, several extra numbers were added to the announced program. The performers, led by Cuthbert Kelly, includes also Dorothy Silk, Nellie Carson, Mary Morris, Martin Boddy and Norman Notley.

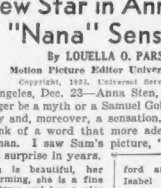
Goldwyn Realizes Dream of New Star in Anna Sten, "Nana" Sensation

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1933, Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Dec. 23—Anna Sten, within a few months, will no longer be a myth or a Samuel Goldwyn dream. She will be a reality and, moreover, a sensation. I say that because I cannot think of a word that more adequately describes this young woman. I saw Sam's picture, "Nana," and I haven't had such a surprise in years.

Miss Sten is beautiful, her voice is charming, she is a fine dramatic actress and has a nice sense of comedy. Sam will be due for a lot of congratulations. But for his great courage we should never have seen this girl on the screen.



Louella O. Parsons

Almost immediately Tolstoy's "Resurrection," which was such an admirable vehicle for Dolores Del Rio, will be whipped into shape for Miss Sten. Sam can only see Fredric March in the role of the Prince opposite his Russian find, and since March has expressed himself as willing to play the part it looks like a go.

Did you ever hear the Mills Brothers on the radio? If you haven't heard them it's just because you haven't a radio. Everyone tunes in on them. These two popular entertainers have signed to sing—and, most surprising—act, in Marion Davies' next picture, "Operator 13." The Radio Rogues are a sensation in "Going Hollywood," but they only appear briefly in their imitations. The Mills boys will really play a part in this Civil War story laid in the South. Walter Wanger, producer of "Operator 13," is a believer in adding entertainment whenever it is possible to important pictures.

Gossip in Hollywood

Hollywood is still agog and chattering over the big news of the week—the word that Kay Francis and Kenneth MacKenna had decided to go it alone. Kay said to me not three months ago, "I wish people wouldn't talk about how happy we are. It makes me afraid." And when I spoke to her at a recent party all she could think of was getting to New York to see Kenneth. She said she was going to spend Christmas with him—or else. Kay is a pretty level-headed girl and she must have given this separation plenty of thought before she made her decision.

Sidney Blackmer and his ex-wife, Lenore Ulric, are both on the radio lot. Sidney is playing one of the leading roles opposite Irene Dunne and Constance Cummings in "Transient Love," while Miss Ulric is in the midst of preparations for her first picture. The chances are she may not do "I Loved an Actress." Her tests are said to have come out so well that Radio is looking for a heavier story for her. There is also a little plan afoot to find a suitable co-starring vehicle for her and Francis Lederer who is said to be regarded as Radio's best male bet.

The Florence Descond-Ted Fiorito romance, at this moment the hottest in Hollywood with the possible exception of Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone and Isabel Jewell and Lee Tracy, started at Loew's State Theater. Miss Desmond, with her imitations, and the good-looking orchestra leader with his band, were on the same program. They went out to lunch day after day to talk over the act and the first thing Fio-Rito, who has a big following with the femmes of the country, had fallen head over heels in love with the English actress and she with him. And it will probably be a marriage for them.

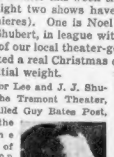
Premiere of O'Neill Play, Return of Coward Opera, Among Santa's Gifts

By GEORGE HOLLAND

In the theater this week there are few facts to retail. On Monday night two shows have their Boston premieres (their 1933 premieres). One is Noel Coward's "Bitter Sweet." Lee and J. J. Shubert, in league with Santa Claus, thought that the stockings of our local theater-goers were bulging with floss. So they donated a real Christmas offering, a song and dance show of substantial weight.

Enough for Lee and J. J. Shubert. At the Tremont Theater, an actor called Guy Bates Post, returns to the Jouvs—the challenging of the Boston public with a grand play entitled "The Play's the Thing." Ferenc Molnar, a very good European playwright, wrote it, and P. G. Wodehouse, probably the greatest light-comedy writer we have, made the dramatic Guy Bates Post adaptation.



My problem for Monday night is whether to cover, or review, "Bitter Sweet," or "The Play's the Thing." Both are shows which have been seen in Boston before. I hope that Boston will enjoy both revivals. "Bitter Sweet" entered New York with the merged sponsorship of Arthur Selwyn and Flo Ziegfeld. One Evelyn Laye played the lead, and gradutated from Broadway to Hollywood. What became of her thereafter I am not sure. A lady named Margaret Carlisle is taking Miss Laye's position in the current "Bitter Sweet." Reports on her are to the effect that she is better than the original.

The most encouraging thing I learned about the new Tremont Theater venture is the fact that Arthur Casey, a real shed-in-the-wool showman, is associated with the management. Arthur Casey, one of our best young directors, will make headline material for New York in the dramatic columns before you and I decide whether the new blends should be scorned or accepted.

Eugene O'Neill's new play, "Days Without End," opens at the Plymouth on Wednesday night. There will be so many ermine coats attached to this one that a shy fellow almost hesitates to talk about it. But if one considers the artistic angle, neglecting completely the social, this should be the most important opening of the year. And I remember "Mary of Scotland," which I touted for the Pulitzer Prize.

There was a girl named Helen Hayes . . .

On Monday, so help me, I shall tell you all about a show called "Whatever Possessed Her." It is going to play the Wilbur Theater, where Al Sheehan is the final word. This "Whatever Possessed Her," might prove to be the biggest comedy hit of the spring season in New York. If it doesn't, Raymond Moore, its producer, will convince me that the business of producing shows is a gamble. Mr. Moore is not only a producer, but he is a manager of a summer theater and "Whatever Possessed Her" is a story about a summer theater. See what!

Elsa Alsen to Be Soloist

The first act of Wagner's "Die Walkure" will be played in concert form at the next pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra to be given in Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, Dec. 29 and 30. This will be the first performance of an entire act from a Wagnerian music drama at these concerts. The act will be performed without any cuts whatsoever. The soloists will be Paul Althouse (Siegmund), Elsa Alsen (Sieglinde), and Fred Patton (Hunding).

Elsa Alsen

As an introductory number, Dr. Koussevitzky will play the Bacchanale from "Tannhauser."

Fiedler to Start New Musical Idea

On Saturday morning, Dec. 30, at 11 o'clock, the Morning Varieties, a novelty in entertainment, will be instituted at Symphony Hall. Arthur Fiedler, with his orchestra of Symphony players, will give orchestral numbers and likewise accompany stage presentations by Hans Wiener and his group of 16 dancers. The sound movie cartoon, "The Three Little Pigs," will be the closing number.

The program follows: Mignon Overture, Thomas; Wein, Weib, und Gesang (The Dancers), Johann Strauss; Nutcracker Suite, Tchaikovsky; Ballet Grotesque (The Dancers); Largo, Handel, Circus (Hans Wiener); The Flight of the Bumble-Bee, Rimsky-Korsakow; The Princess and the Frog King, Pantomime; The Three Little Pigs.

On Stage at State

At the State the stage attraction for the week features the return of the radio favorite Alice O'Leary, in a new program of current song hits. She will be accompanied at the piano by Carl Moore. On Sunday five acts of vaudeville featuring the Loew's State Orchestra with Arthur Geister directing, are presented in addition to the usual screen attractions.

THE OLD HOWARD "HAPPY DAYS" Burlesque

Charming

Christmas Day brings beautiful Margaret Carlisle to the Shubert Theater in Noel Coward's "Bitter Sweet."

Met's Stage Furnishes Merry and Colorful Yule Feast

When Kay Francis appears, the screen becomes glamorous perforce. She is the star of the film current at the Metropolitan, "The House on 56th Street"; and on stage the theater presents a de luxe Christmas bill, sparkling merrily and colorfully, while Fabien Sevitzky offers as clever a Yule specialty as any house of amusement could have. It is a grand program, from start to finish.

The featured picture is melodrama, nicely directed by Robert Florey, and expertly acted by Miss Francis and such able aides as Ricardo Cortez, John Halliday, Gene Raymond, Margaret Lindsay, William (stage) Boyd and Frank McHugh. When such talent performs, any story will shine. This plot happens to be from Joseph Santley's pen; he knows his footlights. So does Austin Parker who adapted the tale to Hollywood purposes.

The central character takes Miss Francis through the years; but that is no handicap for so brilliant a star. She begins as the bride of wealth; a jilted suitor appears on scene, and is killed. So the beautiful lass is sentenced to prison; her husband is later killed in the World War. Free again at last, she tries to cut intent on turning a new leaf. She meets up with Cortez, a card sharp, and they fall in love and ply their trickery together.

In time the pair set up a gambling establishment in the very same house in which Kay had begun her married life so happily years before. One of the victims of their cunning cards is her own daughter, who knows not this is her mother. The child shoots Kay's partner, and Kay takes the blame. That is the beginning of the end—it is not a happy one.

But if the melodrama have its tearful passages, its outcome is the opposite on stage. Here the festive spirit is uppermost, and the revue discloses plenty of ability and variety. For stars there are Jack McLallen and Marsh, assisted by Sassafras"; Buddy Clark, Shurr Brothers, Fred Sydell and "Spotty," plus the ballet.

Bebe Daniels Again Seen

John Barrymore in "Counsellor at Law" is the film attraction for RKO Keith's today. For two years "Counsellor at Law" was Broadway's stage hit.

The story concerns a crisis in the life of one of the greatest criminal lawyers in New York city, and covers a period of three days. Barrymore, in playing the role of the lawyer, is threatened with the loss of his career and his wife, and at the same time is willing to help others in distress. He saves a woman accused of murdering her husband from the electric chair, tries to save a Communist from the police, helps his worthless brother and cheers his mother with his castles tumbling about him.

In the cast with Barrymore are noted stage and screen players, including Bebe Daniels, as his secretary, who worships him; Doris Kenyon as his wife who tolerates him; Onslow Stevens as his partner; Isabel Jewell as his telephone operator; Melvyn Douglas as his rival, and Mayo Methot as the murderess.

Bowdoin Sq. Theater

Beginning tomorrow the Bowdoin has a gala vaudeville bill of six acts. The pictures are Marie Dressler and Lionel Barrymore in "Christopher Bean," and "Lucky Dog," with Chic Sale as the star. "Touchdown Mickey" is the Mickey Mouse cartoon.

Gayety Theater

Starting tomorrow the Gayety, as a special holiday attraction, will offer on the screen Walter Winchell's "Broadway Thru a Keyhole," with a cast of 50, including Constance Cummings, Russ Columbo, Texas Guinan, Blossom Seeley, Frances Williams, Abe Lyman and his band and many other Broadway stars. The co-feature will be "My Woman," featuring Helen Twelvetrees, Victor Jory, Wallace Ford and Claire Dodd. On the stage the feature act will be "Bombo" and his gang, radio's pioneer tenor. Four other acts make up the remainder of the stage show.

Ben Bernie and Gifted Crew at Boston

By HARRIS MORGAN

Ben Bernie labels the new stage show at the RKO Keith Boston as the best that house has had. Week after week the Koerner programs have been of outstanding quality; it takes Bernie and his troupe to go them all one better and put across entertainment that has all the elements of expert and gifted showmanship.

Bernie is a show in himself, and of not many maestros can that be said. He has his own style of humor, and of presenting it; is a personality unto himself, and like to none other, himself labeled by the cigar he affects and his interchanged fiddle and baton. He is the slyest of the sly in his fun; wise-cracks slip oilily from his tongue and always effective for hilarity. Never once does this old master miss fire.

Melody is here in abundance, for the band is as clever as its chief. They play a medley of selections, all with the skill of their craft. Soloists in this orchestra are numerous, for the members appear to be as versatile as their leader in various lines of endeavor, and whatever each does, is well done.

Among the best of the specialists, according to tumultuous hit, is Little Jack Heller, who perches himself up on a stool and crones away most successfully. Among the others are Ann Boland, titian-haired Boston favorite, who is given the heartiest sort of reception; Bill Coleman, impersonator, and the excellent sisters, named Prim.

All, with Bernie leading and triumphing more than any other individual, combine to give this stage as fine a holiday week show as heart could wish.

The featured film is "Son of Kong," whose camera action is its striking feature. For that reason it makes splendid film diversion. Robert Armstrong is the star, he being the hero in the story of adventure upon an island where prehistoric monsters are supposed to be still existent. Helen Mack is the girl in the interwoven romance.

The human actors do well enough, but they are far surpassed by the agile animals depicted, while there is most commendable speed to the cameras.

Joan Crawford's Dancing Lady Tops Gala Orpheum Bill

Loew's Orpheum yesterday swung to stage and screen a gala bill for the holidays, its special attractions consisting of the musical film romance, "Dancing Lady" co-starring Joan Crawford and Clarke Gable, a special Silly Symphony Christmas Cartoon in technicolor, "The Night Before Xmas," a gay and colorful vaudeville show.

The entrancing Joan is seen in another of the roles similar to the "Dancing Daughter" part which brought her to the top of the motion picture world. In "Dancing Lady" she starts as a burlesque queen who rises to the top as a musical comedy star. She is given plenty of opportunity for dancing, singing and romance and she does each to perfection.

The vaudeville show moves with the same merry speed as the screen attraction. Especially entertaining were Lee Murray and the Sinclair Twins in a miniature musical revue that "stopped the show." The twins combine grace and charm with their dancing ability and proved to be great favorites with the audience. Harry Lang and Louise Squire were well received with their melange of merriment and melody followed by Lubin, Larry and Andre who provided laughs galore with their comedy skit and blackface frolic. Others on the bill were Coyde Hager, the "International Street Faker," and Jordan & Grace, in a juggling act.

Rod La Rocque The Star

An announcement of interest comes from F. F. Plimpton, with the word that "S. O. S. Iceberg," screen epic of the Frozen North, has been booked at Tremont Temple, opening on Christmas Day. "S. O. S. Iceberg" was filmed on the west coast of Greenland under the auspices of the Danish Government. The drama tells the story of a lost expedition in the land of Ice, when an intrepid wife flies her own plane to the rescue of her husband.

The filming of the picture was fraught with hazards. The expedition fought cold and exposure only 15 degrees from the North Pole, and under the direction of Dr. Arnold Fanck and the noted Danish explorer, Knud Rasmussen, brought back the most striking and vivid of photography. Rod La Rocque and Leni Riefenstahl play the principal roles.

Showings will be continuous from 1:30 to 5:00, and from 7:00 to 10:30 p. m. during the limited engagement.

Stars, Story, Music, Direction, All Stellar in Brilliance of 'Going Hollywood'

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"Going Hollywood," premiering into Loew's State yesterday for the holiday week, reveals itself as this same Hollywood's choicest picture with song. For this reviewer it is filmdom's musical dream come true. And by the same token of merit it is, for any audience, the answer to fandom's prayer for an exquisitely fashioned Christmas gift on screen. More, it is the first of its type on this side of the ocean to inweave cunningly its harmonies and its dramatic threads. The new picture has Marion Davies, versatilely brilliant, and presenting the finest feminine beauty this department recalls in all the cinema; it has Bing Crosby, at his best, and generous, in song, and baring himself for the first time as a grand actor. It has story, it has score, it has astonishing tempo. It enjoys the swellest direction of any of the American musicals. And its lavishness tops all the rest in being skilfully fitted into the general scheme.

To this department "Going Hollywood" is ravishing in its beauty. It has touches of pathos, it has sparkling humor. It has the musical comedy aspects that bring something new to our native celluloid—blending of fantasy and motion with the glitter. Throughout Miss Davies acts with naturalness and charm. The role calls for half a dozen or more characterizations, and each she shades perfectly, with a display of artistry unmet hitherto in productions of this type. She proves her right to be crowned the rarest of all among younger screen comediennes.

In addition, her beauty is entrancing. Her blonde loveliness is a show in itself, beautifully framed in this masterpiece in which she is equally stellar at song, at dance, and at acting.

Mr. Crosby shares honors with her. This is his greatest picture. His singing was never so good, nor was there ever so much of it. But best of all is his establishing his niche in the studios as a first class romantic lead.

"Going Hollywood" is the first American song film to set up a soul. "There is atmosphere, created and sustained; there is a rhythm to its panoramic current as well as to its inwoven music. Its settings are gorgeous without ever being flashy; it has lush richness overlaid with a poetry of sentiment and life. As when the flowers come alive. Or, even the corn, and the scarecrows.

The extravagances, so deft is the inlaying, seem a believable part of the theme. Not once is the effect harsh or strained; so that "Going Hollywood" has a smoothness of flow comparable to that of the best Continental output.

The plot construction makes the song numbers logical, and not intrusive. Miss Davies is a teacher of French in a girls' school. Against rules, she has a radio in her room, and nas fallen in love with a crooner. She is dismissed from the school about the time she has made up her mind to quit and look up her heart's desire. He rebuffs her, and she follows him to Hollywood. But each time fate strikes, she comes back with women's strategy, and finally, over all obstacles, wins her way and "her man."

At every point the direction of Raoul Walsh, a master of the "Flaili" lens, stands out. There is naught of the humdrum backstage matter; instead, a magnificent handling of crowds of extras, always in motion, and, in general, an entirely novel and refreshing method of making big scenes live and breathe.

These numbers are many, and all are magnificent. For the song, "We'll Make Hay while the Sun Shines," fields and barnyard, a wondrous sequence; for "Our Big Love Scene," giving the picture its melodic theme, a glorious ballet and stage, with the largest orchestra ever used in a movie. This is a symphony of color, spirit, and harmony. There is "Cinderella's Fella," and there is "Going Hollywood," a fox trot; "After Sundown," "Temptation," and yet others, all songs appearing in this department to be in the hit class, thanks to the talent of the team of Nacio Brown and Arthur Freed.

If this be a triumph for Miss Davies and Mr. Crosby and the rest, it is also to be noted that shining talent is contributed by Ned Sparks, by Fifi Dorsay, by Patsy Kelly, Stuart Erwin, Bobby Watson and the Three Radio Rogues. It is a great triumph, too, for Cosmopolitan, the company which produced it.

Scollay Vaudeville

Boston's own comedian, Harry Downing, assisted by his brother Dan, will headline the Scollay Square Theatre's stage show next Monday, in a comedy sketch, "Oh, Madam." Jay Mills & Gertrude Green, in a comical skit entitled "All Work and No Play"; Lewis Mack assisted by Alice Frost, John Haynes and Betty Lewis, in "It's The Law"; the Rex Gal Bros., in a skating and balancing act, are other turns. Charlie Frank and his Monarchs of Modern Music will render selections from "Sitting Pretty."

On Sunday the new screen attraction will be "Hoopla," which stars Clara Bow, with Preston Foster, Richard Cromwell, Herbert Mundin, James Gleason and Minna Gombell.

The Scollay will have a special midnight show on New Year's Eve and will present 10 acts.

MYSTERY OF CHRISTMAS

By Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving

Rector of Trinity Church

Christmas seems really to have begun again its mysterious inner motions, and streaming from afar comes the authentic Christmas mist, laden with memory and hope and inner exaltation. Noiselessly, steadily, like the falling of new snow, just so love mantles again with beauty this charred, scarred, struggle-ground of human life.

True, there are still the furrows of bitterness, poverty, desolation and hunger, never completely covered. But the generous spirit of Christmastide, diffusing peace and good will by every prompting of thought on the birth of Jesus, brings out the hidden best in every one. And as the day-spring from on high shines round the world from Bethlehem, the earth glistens with affectionateness and good deeds.

Unlike a fall of snow, Christmas is not all transitory. It attests the fact that the flickering recognition of God still shines within us in the darkness of our self-seeking, and the darkness has not yet overcome it.

We may claim today a share in the Master's own compassion as He faced the poverty of Judea and Galilee. Jesus is still in the midst of the world, and to His life and person the human heart is responsive. And the hope in us is unconquerable that the affairs of men can be shaped nearer to the pattern alike of His will and the heart's purest desire.

Christmas is old now, and yet strangely new. The angelic announcement to the shepherds—"Peace on earth, good will toward men"—could not better state the most modern aspiration of humanity. We have but to become certain that the spirit and influence of Jesus is God's own provided means of attaining it. Christmas is a present to all mankind. God may have other words for other worlds, but His Word for this, our world, is Christ.

In spite of the pleasant but pressing duties with which one finds oneself surrounded the last few days before Christmas, many socially prominent Bostonians found time yesterday afternoon to witness the play at the Peabody Playhouse, presented by the Boston Children's Civic Theater, and thereby contribute to the Christmas party which this theatrical group is giving to the children of the Peabody Players' Settlement House.

Mrs. Philip Saltonstall and her son, Mr. Nathaniel Saltonstall, were noted in the audience sitting near Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, the latter the author of the little Christmas drama. Miss Lucille Phelan, a deb of two seasons ago, who has become a permanent member of the Boston Children's Civic Theater group, played an important role in the play. Mrs. James T. Phelan of Swampscott and Lynn, was there to witness her daughter's theatrical debut. Mrs. Eva Whiting White was also in the audience.

A Number of Things

—By Charles Hanson Towne—

WE HAVE spoken of changes in fashions of all kinds, for it is obvious that nothing remains static. Fashions in clothes, fashions in fiction alter almost overnight, and one sees now how styles of acting vary, how a new school suddenly appears.

I remember well the sensation the late Mrs. Fiske created when she began, abruptly and without warning, to turn her back to her audience. Her theory was that this was a natural thing to do. Previously it had always been understood that the proscenium arch was an invisible fourth wall of a room, through which the audience mysteriously peered. No actor, because of the known presence of the onlookers, could insult them by turning away from them; yet Mrs. Fiske contended, and sensibly enough, that we all moved about a room and stood or sat where we chose. Why not do it on the stage? One's voice could still be heard if one's back was turned, and a picture of a group of actors in various attitudes would become more realistic if they placed themselves on the stage exactly as they might while conversing at home.

In the beginning there was a little storm of protest, but soon it was discovered that this innovation gave new life, a new naturalness to the proceedings, and you will note, as you attend performances nowadays, how often an actor seemingly ignores those out front. As a matter of fact, he is thinking of them every moment. It is not rude to turn his back, for the onlookers are not supposed to be there at all.

I recall taking a lady to see Mrs. Fiske in the early days of "Hedda Gabler," when our greatest actress wandered about the stage as she wished. It was Christmas time.

In the great scene when Hedda burns the manuscript, she went to the fireplace, and in the sharp, staccato tones for which she was famous, and with her head practically in the chimney, Mrs. Fiske uttered Ibsen's words, "I'm burning your child!" My companion, as the curtain rustled down, turned to me and whispered, "I don't know what she said—but maybe Santa Claus heard!"

They Become Human

MRS. FISKE did much to rid the stage of buncombe. The old school of the "grand manner" was gradually going out, and naturalness was coming in. Actors were learning to speak like human beings, not like automatons. We were even discovering that Shakespeare's lines could be spoken intelligently, not mouthed, as if there was a bit of cake in the actors' throats. If you listen over the radio to some ancient actor ranting a scene from "Macbeth" you will realize how diction has improved, how unnecessary it is to declaim, and how the lines can be made to seem the every-day speech of every-day people like you and me.

Poetry recited over the air is in most cases approached as if it were something fantastic and unreal, something esoteric. School children used to be frightened when they were forced to read blank verse aloud, or lyric poetry. When they saw the ragged lines, they wondered how they could leap from one to the other, as naturally as they might with prose; and that early terror has robbed many a child of his later enjoyment of verse. Teachers insisted that the rhymes should not be emphasized, probably in a laudable effort to avoid singsong; and the struggle to cover up the singing quality—the very essence of poetry—filled youthful elocutionists with fear. But why not reveal the rhymes? The poet himself had no desire to hide them. Pebbles in a stream cause the waters to ripple melodiously.

Realism Is Cumbersome

BUT fashions in verse change. No longer do we seem to have commemoration odes, long lyrics written for special occasions. No Francis Thompson is using old English words like "drave" and "clomb." Instead, we have a realism in our verse which is sometimes very tiresome. Yet what could be simpler and more noble than lines like these from William Watson's threnody on the death of Tennyson, written, of course, in 1892:

"Captains and conquerors leave a little dust
And kings a dubious record of their reign;
The swords of Cæsars, they are less than rust:
If that is antiquated poetry, then give us antiquated poetry. If it hints of the "grand manner," then let us seek to restore the grand manner. Only the tragedy is that there are no poets as great as Tennyson to pass away and inspire such simple yet glowing words. There are no bards—only little singers who, when they die, will not call forth great and eloquent tributes. The Poets Laureate today remain mute. Events in a too fast moving world suppress their voices; they feel no high impulse to chant of them. Imagine any troubadour creating rousing and ringing stanzas in honor of a so-called leader like Hitler! But when greatness comes into the world there will be great poets to interpret the greatness for us.
The poet death remain."

In Other Words

I LOVE your manner, oh so suave
And debonair!
I dote upon your repartee,
Your "savoir faire"!
I'm crazy 'bout your nonchalance,
Your poise, your "verve"!
In short—in plain American—
I like your nerve!

Just Blab You Love Me

—By James M. Cain—

VARIOUS circumstances throw me a great deal with Europeans, particularly European women, and naturally I make comparisons. In general, I give the decision to our own native daughter. She is better dressed, better educated, knows more things to talk about, has better manners. I say better manners in spits of her lesser skill at formality, for it seems to me that manners which aim at ease are to be preferred to manners which aim at stiffness. Furthermore, formality is a somewhat dubious ideal, for the moment you get back of its surface impressiveness you find a dreadful stuffiness of outlook. Balance it all up and the American woman has more modernity, jazzy or not, I like it.

But in one way the European woman leads by so many miles it is not even a race. That is in discretion. Whether she has a title or is of just average rank or picks berries for a living you will know her a long, long time before you learn anything of her love affairs. But try to know an American woman a half hour without hearing every detail of her past, her present and what she conceives to be her future. You can't do it. It is an earful you have to take, regardless of whether you want to or not and regardless of the fact that all such earfuls have a terrible sameness about them. When you've heard one you've heard them all.

WHAT the reason is for this state of affairs I don't know. It may be the recent emancipation from Puritanism that makes American womanhood so gabby. It may be the hospitality of American courts to heart balm suits, which places a premium on publicity in romance. It may be the very spirit of modernity I was just talking about: it is hostile to secrets, for the modern psychiatry has been very stern about what it calls suppressions. A European lady, of course, has never heard of the modern psychiatry.

Whatever it is, it is not the man these days who kisses and tells, for he usually has excellent reasons for keeping his mouth shut. It is the woman and certainly this endless blabbing is responsible for much of the unhappiness we have with us.

Drama came into the world, not when we learned to love but when we learned to talk, and however exciting it is on the stage it is a plague when it enters the average life. Most of these situations that our ladies find themselves in, if kept discreetly sub rosa, would right themselves without a catastrophic second act, but when the best friend has been told and the boy friend's best friend and the husband's best friend and finally the husband himself—that is where the fast music starts. Then, no matter how the third act is written, public humiliation has become a factor, on one side or the other, and it is precisely the factor that will not permit a broken heart to mend. What people think has become more important than the specific pain involved and this leads to lawyers, bitterness and scandal.

IF EVERY American woman, at the moment her heart begins to flutter, would pay an impecunious Russian baroness $5 to tell her how to handle the matter, the divorce rate would be materially reduced. In this field these European ladies know their stuff.

Puzzle

DON'T ask me why
My heart, today,
Is yours to keep
Or throw away—

Don't ask me why
I scent romance
In the warm magic
Of your glance;

Drink of the potion
Cupid brews
And drop your search
For errant clues;

Here is our night—
Our harvest moon,
And, if disaster
Follows soon

Meet it, my dear,
With head held high—
Love is like that—
Don't ask me why!

The New Illiterates

—By G. K. Chesterton—

LONDON.—A symposium was published recently in The Nation (New York) on "Books I Have Never Read," and there are one or two points about it that are signs of the times. First of all, in comparing it with the old "talks about books," I notice that the affectation has changed. I also notice that it is still an affectation. The symposiasts of my boyhood took a serious pride in boasting of the great books they had read or of the great book they said they had read; often, I fancy, of the great books they thought they had read. For in a bookish age men often know as much about books that they forget to read them.

An earnest critic made a list of the Hundred Best Books, trying to be strictly fair to the most remote creeds and cultures, and insisting that the man in the street must not too hastily absorb all the classics of Confucianism without balancing them with at least a few informing volumes of Taoism. A famous actor waved away from him the Hundred Best Books and said he would be content with the lifelong study of the Bible and Shakespeare. All this may have been rather too serious, but it was at least sane. It is a solid, unaltered fact that a man has missed a great deal if he knowns nothing of the Bible or Shakespeare and that he has gained something if he has learned a little about the great Confucian civilization.

Hollow Superiority

BUT it seems to be the new affectation to boast of not having read books and especially the best books. I suspect that the new pose is often quite as hollow as the real one. In some cases, at least, it has quite as little sincerity and has exactly the same superiority.

The old poseur showed his superiority to common men by having read the books they had never heard of; the new poseur shows it by not having read the books that they have heard of. The second, indeed, is the more arrogant of the two. The first only despises ordinary readers; the second also despises the most extraordinary writers. It must be a very comfortable feeling.

It bears a great resemblance to the intellectual or rather unintellectual levity of those who now give vague descriptions of how they have come to forrest all about the religion of their fathers. If it is stupid to despise people because they do not understand a book it is stupider to despise the book because we have not tried to understand it.

It's Literary Fashion

WE have here the strange sight of educated and capable men swaggering down the columns of The Nation and asking to be admired for not having enjoyed "David Copperfield" or "The Three Musketeers." One of the most brilliant of American novelists has an extraordinary passage in which this artificial impatience precipitates him into pure nonsense. He talks about being forced to read "Chaucer's every, most illiterately spelled line," surely a phrase which, if we could take it seriously, well deserves to be called illiterate. He then lumps along with Chaucer the entire works of Milton and couples him with the name of Adelaide Anne Procter, calling them all "dreadful productions." Surely not dreadful in the same way. I do not imagine the novelist means a word of all this; he is simply flaunting the new literary fashion of not liking literature.

Mr. Mencken clears himself of the charge of appreciating Dante and covers himself with glory by implying that he only remembers Dore. The whole is a most interesting study in the new intellectualism that is actually proud of its own ignorance. The last example is especially typical, for Dante contains thousands of thoughts that would materially assist the free thinker to begin to think.

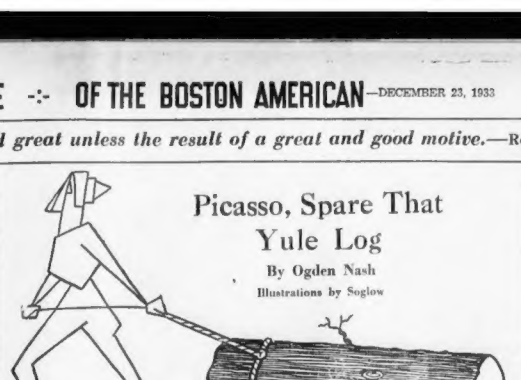
Picasso, Spare That Yule Log

By Ogden Nash

Illustrations by Soglow



WHEN I was but a boy
'Twas my once-a-yearly joy
To arise of a Yuletide morning,
And eagerly behold
The crimson and the gold
Of the messages the mantelpiece adorning.
There were angels, there were squires,
There were steeples, there were spires,
There were villagers, and mistletoe and holly,
There were cosy English inns
With the snow around their chins,
And I innocently thought them rather jolly.
I blush for me, but by your leave
I'm afraid that I am still naive.

O GIVE me an old fashioned Christmas card,
With mistletoe galore and holly by the yard,
With galumptious greens and gorgeous scarlets,
With crackling logs and apple-checked varlets,
With horses prancing down a frosty road,
And a stage coach laden with a festive load,
And the light from the wayside windows streaming,

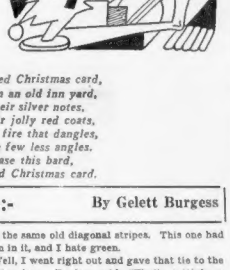
DEPARTED is the time
Of Christmases sublime;
My soprano has descended to basso;
And the mantelpiece contains
The angular remains
Of an early representative Picasso.
There are circles, there are dots,
There are corners, there are spots,
There are modernistic snapshots of the city;
Or, when the artist lags,
They are livened up with gags.
You must choose between the arty and the witty.
I blush for me, but I must say
I wish you'd take them all away.



O GIVE me an old fashioned Christmas card,
With hostlers hostling in an old inn yard,
With church bells chiming their silver notes,
And a good fat goose by the fire that dangles,
And a few more angels and a few less angles.
Turn backward, Time, to please this bard,
And give me an old-fashioned Christmas card.

Christmas Preferred

-:- By Gelett Burgess

THE idea of our new Reformed Christmas scheme came from my receiving, one day, a magnificent necktie in a box. Magnificent, but nothing that any sane man would ever buy, because, I suppose, it was purchased by a woman. Such ties are always a fine quality of silk, but they're always too wide, too thick, and usually have the same old diagonal stripes. This one had green in it, and I hate green.

Well, I went right out and gave that tie to the elevator boy. Reuben said, "That's suttinly a swell necktie for Sunday!" but I never caught him with it on. And when the days grew short and gloomy again, I said to my family:

"I've had enough of this Christmas Common. This year let's invest in Christmas Preferred. It's simply absurd to have people giving you things you don't need and don't want and don't like. To select anything for another person to wear is impertinent, anyway."

"Now, this is my new and improved Christmas scheme. We will each of us decide what we could afford to give every one of the family on Christmas, and we'll take that money and buy things for ourselves, instead. In that way everyone ought to be pleased, and when we open our packages this time and say 'Oh, it's just what I wanted!' it won't be a hypocritical loving lie."

CHRISTMAS EVE arrives as usual. Lots of fun trimming the tree. Every one of us had a lot of packages and we found everything we had wanted, of course—hadn't we bought them all ourselves? But somehow it wasn't so much fun as we had expected. It was kind of flat. We thought mother seemed kind of queer, too. Kind of quiet.

"Open your presents, Mother, why don't you?" we all said. She had four or five packages beautifully wrapped.

And when she finally did open them, we looked at her in amazement. Why, her boxes were all empty.

"Why, Mother!" we exclaimed, "haven't you given yourself any presents?"

"I just couldn't bear to spend all that money on myself," she said. "It seemed so selfish somehow, for Christmas. I guess I'm too old-fashioned."

Then we all confessed. Mother was right. Our Christmas Preferred was just a festival of selfishness and there wasn't any real Christmas spirit whatever. We missed the suspense, and the surprise, and the love, too, I suppose, and the "What in the world will I EVER get from Ned?" and the Good Will to Men flavor of the day.

And that was the last of our improved Christmas, or Christmas Preferred. Next year we invested like everybody else in good old Christmas Common.

And when I received another necktie with green in it, I smiled and said, like all the rest of the family, "Oh, Why, it's just what I wanted!" And the queer part of it was that I really meant it, too.

For I had learned what Christmas meant; and that Christmas presents weren't things at all. They were thoughts. I was so impressed by the idea, in fact, that one day I almost wore that necktie!

Vagabondia

—By Bruno Lessing—

ROME.—A Merry Christmas to all. Make ye merry, all my friends and all my enemies—though God wot why I should have enemies — and all ye indifferent ones who are neither the one nor t'other. Because today I just don't care and want everybody to be happy.

Rome, in a manner of speaking, is the home of that religious belief which gives Christmas its significance. To me, unfortunately, the religious aspect does not appeal so strongly. I was brought up in New York amid a rather irreligious and scoffing environment. As boys we went to Sunday School on that day to graft some Christmas presents. Sometimes we went to several Sunday schools and made a haul.

But the spirit of the festival lingers in my blood. And as the day approaches I always get sentimental. Following my trade as a writer I feel it a duty to write about Christmas Day and New Year's Day. Unfortunately I cannot do it perfunctorily. It would be so much easier if I could. Each of those holidays is a landmark in the journey through life to me. Just old force of habit and association and memories and that sort of thing. And when I write about them I feel queer tuggings at heart-strings that I hardly knew existed.

Happy for One Week

TO me those two days always represented two distinct ideas. One unselfish, and the other the very apotheosis of selfishness. Christmas always meant GIVING to others and New Year's Day always meant taking stock of one's own future. Anyway, here's Christmas and I'm not going to think of my own troubles—if I can help it—for a week.

On Christmas I am overwhelmed with a desire to make all the kids in the world happy. The task of washing a billion mastodons. Impossible, of course, but I can't help the yearning for it. Not that it would do the little brats any lasting good.

But it would make them happy for a day and would help to build up in their minds the vision of glorious milestones of life, to which each year they could look forward. When you give humanity something to which it can look forward with certainty you're doing a good job. So why not give the kids Christmas?

Habit Good for All

LAST YEAR I blew in about thirty bucks in Paris buying drums and choo-choo cars and dolls and just going about haphazard in the poorest quarters of the town and handing them out to kids on the street. Not entirely unselfish. I'll bet I had more fun out of it than the kids had. This year, owing to the eagerness with which European countries do not want American dollars, I'm afraid I can't go higher than twenty bucks. And I'm going to cut out my own fun and have someone else hand out some toys anonymously.

Am I getting a big kick with my idea of setting myself up as an example to others? You bet your boots I am. It's one of the mighty few habits I have that I would advise anyone else to follow.

Children, of course, need other things than toys. If one had millions to bestow upon them in the way of hospitals, clinics and educational institutions, I would, unquestionably, do them more real good than playthings. But on Christmas Day I cannot think of anything else than what would do them good. It is supremely and overwhelmingly a day for affording them delight. When I want a good time I don't want anyone to "do me good." (I'm afraid always be afraid that the first step in the "doing good" process would be to cut out the good time.)

My only desire is that, at least on this one day in the year, the kids should put their weary heads on the pillow at night, clutching their toys in their arms, and dream joyously of a perfect day.

Remember Your Joys

OF COURSE, if you have a bit of cash to spare, you can always give papa a safety razor so that he can shave himself and give mamma a vacuum cleaner. But you can do that any day in the year, Christmas, though, is THE day in the life of children. And on that day they don't want advice, they don't want to be "done good to," they don't want dentists to examine their teeth or doctors to tell them to open their mouths and say "Ah!" They want joy. They look forward to it. They expect it. And since the days when the earliest Ptolemies wanted to make their royal children happy they gave them toys. I cannot read about the excavations of ancient tombs that disclose childish playthings gathered together about the sarcophagus of a baby that started its journey into eternity at an unfilmely age without tears coming to my eyes.

Kids and toys, toys and kids—I assure you that at Christmas time they are synonymous with me. And, therefore, folks, I'm asking you to have a heart and do your best to give the kids their day.

Don't try to organize it or fuss about it. Just loosen up—anywhere from 50 cents to whatever you can afford—and give some poor kid a monkey-on-a-stick or a game or a doll or a book of pictures or a hobby-horse or a paint box or a toy set of furniture. Even if you're sure it's going to be smashed to pieces before the day is over. Kids often get a delight out of destroying things. Spank them yesterday and tomorrow, but not on Christmas Day.

Step on the Joy Button

I SUPPOSE I'm silly. I'm trying, anyway, not to be maudlin. I merely want to put on record today how I feel. To understand the spirit of childhood we have only to think of our own lives. On loss of those who were dear to us, the crushing blows that Fate has dealt us and our weariness of life's vicissitudes, to realize that, after all, we all are children, drearily helpless, in the face of the forces that control the universe.

Come on! Loosen up! And a Merry Christmas to you all!

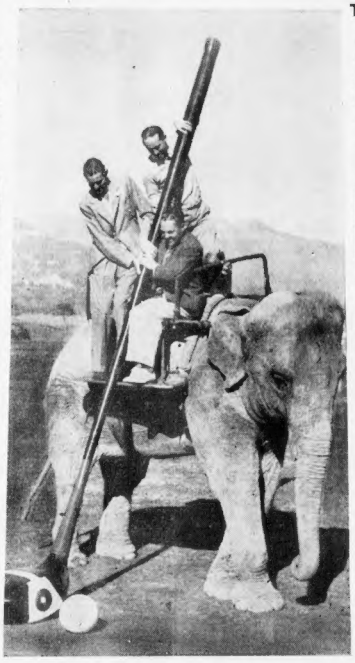
BATHING SUIT OF 1934

Perhaps it is too soon to be thinking of a bathing costume, that is, unless you contemplate a southern trip; but, anyhow, here's a preview of a novelty costume that will be used generally when the good old summer time returns. The wearer is Miss Mabelle Petit, of Boston.

GOING UP! ! !

Alfred Vimal, noted in Italy as mountain climber, goes up a tough one on side of famous Drei Zinnen Pea, of the Dolomites (mountains) in Eastern Italy. Ringed spikes are driven into rocks. He then moves up his ropeway along the sheer facades.



EASY GOING FOR 18 HOLES

Anna May, famous movie elephant, took part in festivities preceding Pasadena (California) $4000 Open. Look at three famous golfers "aboard." They are Horton Smith, Leo Diegel and Johnny Dawson. Dawson swings the gigantic driver. It's no Scotch club—it's ten times usual size.

TAUNTON BOYS IN 7-DAY STORM

WOODSHED TRAGEDY

Mrs. Florence Anderson of 15 West Brookline st., West End, won a Suffolk court decree nisi after testifying that her husband spanked her. Testimony indicated that "hubby" administered good old-fashioned spankings on various occasions.

"HIS INTEREST"

Beautiful Lenita Lane, who, Mrs. Crane Wilbur, New York, charges, is the main interest of her husband, Crane Wilbur, playwright and actor. Wilbur is on bail for failure to pay $6800 allegedly due his wife, who is suing him for divorce because of his admitted infatuation for Miss Lane.

THOUSANDS MADE HAPPY BY GOOD PEOPLE OF BOSTON

Christmas Day will be merry for more than 15,000 children and for 6000 mothers and fathers as a result of the activities of the Evening American's 1933 Christmas Basket campaign. Generosity of donors to the fund, sports promoters, theatrical men, actors and actresses and many volunteer workers has provided turkey and all the fixings for this great number, who otherwise would have had to add the misery of hunger on Christmas Day to the sorrows of the past year. Now they will sit down to a real, honest-to-goodness dinner of turkey, potatoes, peas, corn, bread, jam, oranges, candy, cookies, onions. It is Boston's greatest Christmas gift—and each and every one of the many who will be happy on Christmas Day joins in thanking you, and you, and you, and wishing you a Merry Christmas. The baskets are being distributed today, and here is shown one of the baskets going out from the Economy stores, one of the several companies which put up the good things. Every recipient was investigated and there were no duplications. The Evening American only regrets that it was impossible to fill the many thousands of individual requests received. Every penny in the fund was spent. Requests this year broke all records.

BEST DRESSED

Mrs. Harrison Williams, New York and Palm Beach social leader, whom Paris modistes elected as among the ten best dressed women in the world. The American selection is seen strolling at Palm Beach, Fla., in a fetching pajama lounging costume.

"AMERICA'S SWEETHEART" BACK TO STAGE AFTER LONG ABSENCE

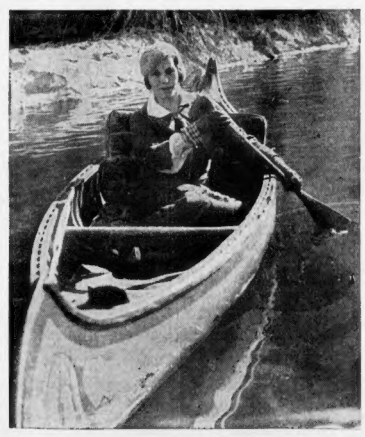
SAFETY HELMET

Professional hockey teams are taking steps to prevent head injuries such as suffered by "Ace" Bailey, who is making a desperate fight for life in the Boston City Hospital. "Billy" Buckles, of Baltimore, displays gear.



WILL PADDLE HER OWN CANOE

Boxy and Slim With Bulk Tabu

By Annice Brink

WHAT'S DOING in suits? Most of us get a fit ever regularly in spring. Once upon a time, when suits were less individual and less becoming to the five feet two and under tribe, when the fever struck, we succumbed, and later rued the whole business. This spring, particularly, such a dreadful situation should not come to pass because whatever our figure, whether we're long legged and stride-y with a yen for careless things, or small and a bit round and inclined to daintiness, we can be suited easily and well.

JAUNTY REEFERS

There certainly won't be much excuse for seeing seventy-five replicas of yourself between home, the South or North stations, and town. The smart length of coat for spring? Hip length. Two-thirds. Three-quarters. Seven-eighths. 11 inches from the ground, as to skirt. The long reefer silhouettes are trim as a coast guard cruiser, and fast immediately swell for disguising a few extra pounds.

Boxy jackets are going to be important. However, boxiness this year does not by a long shot mean bulkiness. The jackets may be caught under the arms, fitted in a cunning way. Or box effects may be promoted by panels. Two lengths are right for boxy jackets—just to the hip, or to the finger tips. Skirts will not flare a great deal; almost never with box jackets. Tube-slim skirts will be best. And kick pleats, bless them, are good as ever. Long may they wave!

SHRIMP PINK

Softness, in both color and texture, will be a new note. You may wear a sporty swagger suit whose color approaches shrimp pink. Black overplaiding on a grayed pastel, strawberry pink, will be very much in the swim.

Ribbed woolen mixtures will be among the first favorites, if not at their head. Because ribbed woolens cut on the bias, or cut diagonally, or symetically, are good to our poor little human bumps and hollows, they are bound to be outstanding.

Peeling Tomatoes

To remove the skin from tomatoes easily, put them in hot water or over the gas flame. Peel and put in the refrigerator to chill.

Wax paper should be kept handy to cover the cut side of a lemon or orange, cover cheese, wrap an onion or cover food in the refrigerator.

Bake a small sliced onion with Boston Baked Beans. Small sausages also add a different flavor to these delicious beans although they lean away from the true New England product with the sausage substitute in place of salt pork.

When baking juicy pies, put in each pie a spoonful of fine tapioca; it prevents the juice from running over and gives the pie an excellent flavor. When baking pies or crusts, brush over the top of the pastry with milk, water or cream to help brown crust.

Come Into a New Kind of Shining Kitchen

We have cheer, extraordinary convenience, and a color scheme that has ten times more personality than the usual kitchen shows, although achieved with no extra expenditure or trouble. A new metal that is rust proof and easy to clean is one of the kitchen's most interesting points. The same metal is used on a cover that shuts down on the gas stove, adding work surface.

WITH "SCRUB" and "shine" reaching the point where they are almost strangers, practically never synonymous in the modern kitchen, today's housewife has exceeding much for which to be thankful.

There's so much to recommend the model modern kitchen, of which a corner is shown above, that a starting point for this tale is hard to determine. As you enter it, no doubt your eyes will be attracted to the unusual platinum colored surfaces, strangely mellow at the same time they are lustrous, of the sink, the gas stove cover, and of the working spaces on tables and cabinets. They are made of, or covered with, monel metal. Known professionally in industry, aircraft and institutions, its many unusual points make it natural that we should have it in our homes. Rust-proof, corrosion-resistant, non-chipping, sturdy. It is a joy to clean, and it couldn't be more decorative even if that were the sole idea. Scrubbing is an unknown quantity.

A gas stove affords more working space and is attractive with a monel metal cover dropped over it. The stove is in the foreground, in the event that you do not recognize it at first! The utensils on the stove cover and those on the little work-table on the right are also unique. They are black and chipless. Who hasn't mourned the passing of a favorite pan or pot, which always seemed to take a personal interest in our cooking efforts, when a score of chips finally put it out of commission?

To all you earnest decorators the idea behind the striking color scheme will be vitally interesting. Mrs. Harold Everett Porter, keen and clever, set out to prove that even with all the man pieces such as mechanical refrigerator, stove, utensils and so on, in plain white, there is absolutely no need for a kitchen to lack color and even hint on looking institutional

Delft blue, a particularly rich shade, is painted a bit higher than the ordinary chair rail reaches, a vivid band of vermilion tops it, and the rest of the wall is oyster white. At the window hang terry cloth curtains, plaided in delft, vermilion, oyster white and yellow. The terry cloth has a drawn-work effect, and with the ruffles and tie backs is feminine enough to suit anyone. A red shelf with little flower pots in blue and red is particularly good for a city window, lending cheer and color that makes one forget the unfriendly brick facade which might be opposite.

Such a kitchen should be of interest to anyone who is about to build or buy or redecorate a home. We'll be glad to tell you where it may be seen. Either write to the Woman's Page Editor, Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, or phone her at LIB. 4000

Note of Thanks for Passes

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I received several passes from a certain young man. I thanked him for the passes, but I want to do the correct thing and send him a note of thanks. I want the note to be sincere, but not too friendly and not too "stiff." How shall I word this note?

T.

I am glad that you have decided to add a note of thanks to your spoken words of thanks. Such thoughtfulness as that deserves special gestures of appreciation. Something like this, perhaps.

Dear Bill: Please let me say again how very much I appreciate your goodness in thinking of me and in making such kind plans for my happiness. I have enjoyed more than I can tell you using the passes that you have given me, and this is a note to tell you so, and to thank you again for your friendliness and generosity.

All good wishes and friendliest greetings, and the hope to see you soon. Most sincerely,

Gay Holiday Touch

At this season of the year the stores are literally filled with small favors such as toy Santas, imitation Yule logs, reindeer and snowballs.

These, with tiny Christmas trees, can be used very effectively to decorate the holiday dinner table. A final gay touch may be given by bringing in a large cake for dessert—one with soft white icing and gay candles twinkling brightly on it.

Wouldst Be Empress or Star?

Name your mood, Madame—will it be something a la Dietrich, a little on the regal, or with a feeling for the manner in which the Empress Josephine wore her clothes—name it, and you can have it.

Three evening gowns that caused swooning by the inclined-to-weight ranks were shown recently. The "Dietrich" mood was in black satin gored lines alendderly fitted, fastening with little rhinestone ball buttons and dropping off the shoulders—the shoulder line is edged with iridescent cog.

"Mary of Scotland," brought to the stage in dramatic genius and gown-loveliness by Helen Hayes, was the inspiration for an Elizabethan orche in rich grape red crepe with an upstanding collar, and sleeve ruffles are fashioned of the same fabric, but in lattice lace, very crisp and starched.

Napoleon's Josephine would have loved the babyish pink tulle with ruffles, very empress as to waistline, with the tiny high bodice girdled under the breasts.

For those who do not feel in the mood dramatic moods, there are the long, lustrous black net evening gowns in town, both revealing ruffled treatments. One has a neckline way up high under the throat, the skirt is of shallow ruche-ruffles from knee to floor and the sleeves are of the same ruffles expressed in cunning capelets—a pink metal girdle sets the entire gown off.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

There's a girl in my husband's office whose whole purpose in life seems to be to "be a pal to the boys." She's a nice girl to meet, maybe a good girl in the technical sense—don't know this for a certainty. But every now and then I wonder just what there is in this "pal" business. Or is it a business or a racket?

The men from my husband's office are always quoting this girl and telling what a brick she is about loaning them money, buying their wives' Christmas and birthday presents for them and generally being "a grand sport" in the masculine sense of the word (which I sometimes think means just being a simple, hundred per cent idiot).

I forgot to mention one of the girl's outstanding talents—she can drink like a man, or a fish. Well, anyway, Pandora, my dander's up finally. This girl makes me tired, and I'm getting darn weary of having her dished up to me endlessly as one of God's noble women.

What do YOU think?

THE MISSUS.

DEAR MISSUS

I think the girl is a luckless featherbrain who's going to wake up some day in her fool's parties and discover how squalid—and empty—is this business of being 'a good sport."

As for you, madam, I'd put the brakes on that temper. If you find it difficult, just ponder on the tangible evidence of happiness you have as against the passing, ephemeral pleasure the girl in your husband's office gets out of being everybody's pal.

Quaint Storybook Clothes Are Being Revived for Little Girls

By Victoria Gaines

WITH CHRISTMAS COMING and children the center of interest, storybook characters are being revived in the form of children's clothes, toys, etc. First, we had the Little Women clothes 1933 modes for 1933 misses—and now we have Alice in Wonderland costumes for young moderns.

You can now dress your young hopeful in clothes to match her favorite storybook character, to throw in a doll or toy to boot. With Walt Disney's famous Three Little Pigs leading the way, we can now expect an influx of Red Riding Hood capes, Cinderella slippers and Goldilock curls.

Anyone who doubts the drawing power of these childhood classics on the youngest generation should watch the crowds of rapt, attentive little girls who stand in awe before the dress that Alice "really and truly" wore. We don't know why boy heroes have not the same appeal for well-dressed Young Men of Manhattan, aged around 10—but on thinking back, we recall that all our favorites, Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn, and even Robinson Crusoe, were such ragged creatures that their costumes would hardly cause a flock of imitators.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND

Little girl costumes, like Alice in Wonderland are really charming things. They're all made after the same model worn by Charlotte Henry, who plays Alice in the forthcoming picture, which in turn, are faithfully copied from the original drawings of the beloved Carroll book. They're the full-skirted, puff-sleeved affairs that make any mischievous imp look like a chubby cherub, and a demure apron completes the effect of innocent childhood. These frocks come in pastel organdies or flowered prints, and are appropriately finished off with an Alice in Wonderland headband. Modern Alices can have dolls dressed exactly like themselves if they wish.

"LITTLE WOMEN"

Any woman or girl who has laughed and wept over Jo's shorn locks or Amy's ill-fated pickles in "Little Women" will have these dear characters vividly recalled to her in the "Little Women" costumes recently brought out. These are adaptations of the actual costumes worn by Katharine Hepburn and other stars in the popular picture of that name.

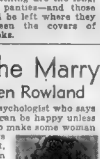
Meg's grim gray velvet is there, with sheer white undersleeves peeking demurely out of gray velvet, oversleeves—as is poor Beth's frock of checked gingham with the white linen yoke and sleeves that make it look like a guimpe. And Jo turns up in a surprisingly smart costume of checked silk taffeta with a plain taffeta bolero jacket and white organdy collar.

All that's lacking are the long, lace-trimmed pantues—and those can very well be left where they belong—between the covers of the story books.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

"Here's a psychologist who says that no man can be happy unless he is trying to make some woman happy," remarked Mrs. Divot, laying down her newspaper.



Helen Rowland

"That," said Mrs. Green, emphatically, "explains EVERYTHING! From the bored, disgruntled look on the average bachelor's face to the failure of companionate marriage!

"It explains why widowers, no matter how bereaved, nearly always hasten to remarry; and why gentlemen prefer clinging, little mollusks to nice, strong, efficient girls who can check their own trunks, carry their own luggage and pay their cab fare.

"Above all, it explains why modern men and women are so dissatisfied and restless. That's how cute old Dame Nature FIXED things—and we're all trying to prove that we're smarter than she is."

"Well, don't blame ME!" said Mrs. Divot. "I've always known that no woman could be happy unless she was trying to make some MAN happy. That's why I gave up my job to become the guardian of Bill's socks and digestion. But a man is an awful responsibility!"

"A man is always happiest when he is playing Santa Claus to some woman, giving her things, bringing her flowers, doing something to please and surprise her. And a weak little thing who 'needs' him gives him more sense of responsibility, which satisfies his ego, inflates his vanity and reduces his inferiority complex.

"More women have tied men to them by laying their heads and their burdens on the shoulders of the so-called stronger sex than by putting their own shoulders to the wheel and making the path to marriage easy."

"But," protested Mrs. Divot, "every young man's Big Idea today seems to be to dodge marriage and avoid the responsibility of supporting ANY woman. And every modern girl's Big Idea seems to be to find a job and escape the responsibility of keeping house for a man."

"And that," declared Mrs. Green triumphantly, "is why so many marriages go bust, and so many women go to sanitariums. When you dodge the 'responsibilities' of marriage you're dodging your best bet of your one chance of happiness and going against Nature. And the first thing you know you are all full of inhibitions and complexes that only a psychologist can unravel."

"Yes" agreed Mrs. Divot, with a faint sigh. "A woman—even a golf-widow—is always happiest when she is mothering some man. 'It satisfies'" But that was a mean trick for Mother Nature to play on a girl who hates cooking, and on a man who hates to go home nights!"

Over a flower strewn path, between rosy lawn clouds, comes this happy pair, while the choir of bluebirds sings the wedding march in floss notes. Surprising How Bathing Suit Tan Lingers to Spoil the Decolletage

(POSED BY LILLIAN GARVEY)

By Therese Deschamps

Lovely curled coiffures, rich furs and luxurious clothes and fabrics all demonstrate the revival of the "lovely lady" ideal once more. Feminine complexions as never before simply MUST BE fresh and lovely to compete successfully with the exquisite gold and silver lace, and the richly colored velvets so popular for gay evening occasions this winter.

Left-over tan and freckles on shoulders, arms and backs—surprising how many gals still have remnants of 'em—simply won't go. If you are planning a BIG evening this New Year's Eve—as who isn't what with repeal and this and that—it's none too soon to think about fading out unwanted tan and freckles. There's nothing more alluring to the masculine eye than alabaster white, smooth shoulders and arms. They make the most practical business man lyrical and romantic.

If you have only a light sprinkling of cute freckles across your nose—so much the better for you. They are really attractive and adorably feminine on some girls . . . Janet Gaynor, for instance . . . shine alone by all means. But those freckles on the same back and shoulders . . . or red, roughened skin . . . is another matter.

And it's a many feminine tragedy when the lowcut necklines on your newest evening frock and your last summer's bathing suit line do not coincide!

It's well to think of your arms, back and shoulders as you do your face and neck, and give them the same careful daily attention. You can't see your own back—which is just as well in many cases, perhaps—but your friends can and do.

Many of us are prone to neglect our backs for weeks, and then frantically try to freshen them up miraculously by one or two hasty treatments. Backs and shoulders need plenty of soap and water to keep them soft and smooth. A skin you love to touch" isn't acquired overnight.

A long-handled bath brush is a good investment for scrubbing that hard-to-reach spot just between your shoulder blades.

There are many excellent bleaching creams and lotions on the market, manufactured by reliable cosmetic concerns . . . cucumber, lemon and other bleaching creams and lotions. Some are mild, and others are stronger. But it's best to give the mild ones a fair trial first. Sadly enough, skins which tan and freckle most easily are often dry and sensitive and cannot stand harsh treatment.

I have an excellent recipe for a marvelous cucumber bleach you can make at home, and some good tips on bleaching creams and lotions. Want 'em to help you prepare for New Year's Eve or that dance you've been counting on so much? I'll be glad to mail them to you if you'll send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Therese Deschamps, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston.

Beauty Questions

Astringents

Question: I am so interested in your column, and find it very helpful. How can I make a mild, inexpensive astringent at home. My skin is quite dry.—M. A., Medford

Answer: Plain cold water has astringent properties . . . and it certainly is cheap enough. Or you might try adding a few drops of tincture of benzoin to your final rinse. Witch hazel is another good astringent, but you may find it too strong, since your skin is dry. Never apply an astringent without cleansing your skin thoroughly.

Lovely Nails

Question: My finger nails are very brittle. I am a stenographer, and they break so easily when I use a typewriter. What can be done about this?—Miss C. R., Lowell.

Answer: At night before going to bed apply nourishing cream or a good cuticle oil. Warm olive oil "soaks" for a few minutes several times a week will help, also.

Egg Facials

Question: Are the white of egg facials for home use, which you mentioned the other day, good for enlarged pores?—D. A., Dorchester.

Answer: Yes, indeed. White of eggs have a mildly astringent effect on the skin. But don't use them oftener than once every 10 days or two weeks.

Looking Backward Over Bucky Harris' Managerial Shoulder ↑↓ And Why Bucky May Succeed Where the Older Pilots Failed

By AUSTEN LAKE

It must be that Bucky Harris is shaking hands with himself this Christmas, because Tom Yawkey, the hereditary industrialist who is also a patron saint, or angel to the Red Sox, has not only made him manager but has bought him a shiny new ball club as well. This is not a common custom among ball patrons by any means, and the method under the previous owner, Bob Quinn, was to turn a manager loose on a covey of male Cinderellas which only a pigwidgeon, or fairy prince, could transform into something beautiful.

And the managers themselves were a nondescript crew, plucked from the discard or rebuilt from obsolete models, like Lee Fohl, Bill Carrigan, Heinie Wagner and Shano Collins, who are now retired to private life attending their gasoline pumps, poultry ranches, lumber groves and Kaffee Klatches. They were amiable fellows to be sure, who always had a jug of frisky liquids tucked in the closet for the use of visiting newsmen, so that in their little day we were pretty fond of each one for his own sake. And they put up a brave front, saying each spring how they planned to storm the ramparts of glory, though sometimes, in sheer loneliness and despair, they would bust out and confess that the outlook was really pretty ragged and they were no wizards.

Newsmen Yielded to the Cordial Atmosphere

Life in that stage was pretty fraudulent for the writers, who were torn between duty to their family journals and to their amiable hosts, so that the papers paid telegraph tolls on a good deal of tripe, until finally one managing editor, who had once served an apprenticeship in sports writing, wired his staff man that the club couldn't possibly be that good and to come on home.

Well, it is not easy when you are living a life of pampered luxury with all expenses, including ample meal money, to bite the hand that feeds and drinks you. And, too, the easy intimacy with the mental cripples and old codgers who were playing then, caused the newsmen to pull their editorial punches. Because when you get to call each other Harry and Bill, and prowl around together during evenings, or perhaps sit up half the night telling about your woes, loves and hates, you do not immediately tap off a critical analysis of that player's failings and maybe call him an inept stumblebum who is muscle bound above the ears.

There were always such winsome, droll characters as Tom Oliver, who loved to sing three part harmonies in his reedy tenor, with his arm slung over your shoulder. And though you knew instinctively that Tom could not hit a bull with a banjo, you were forever telling the home folks that last winter Tom had his tonsils out, which would add 50 points to his batting average. You simply developed a malignant case of enchantment.

Then there was that spring at Savannah, two years ago, when Shano Collins, who was the ideal host, would dose his guests with Georgia jake, a peculiarly virulent beverage which melted your throat plumbing and of which, he himself, did not partake. And Shono, who had earned the endorsement of every newsman by letting the Red Sox into the giddy heights of sixth place the year before, kept repeating "Well, I begin to see daylight."

He continued to see daylight until, in the latter part of April, the Yankees, Athletics and Senators strewed his club all over the scenery and finally in a fit of despondency he leaped overboard one Sunday afternoon in Cleveland and refunded the club to Bob Quinn by telephone before hopping a fast train for home. He was, as I recall, the third and last manager to resign under his own power, Lee Fohl and Bill Carrigan having retired previously.

Ghostly Titters From the Distant Past

Well now, next spring when we go South again with Bucky Harris, there should be no reason for whipping up our essays artificially, any more than Bucky, the former colliery slate picker who rose to the dinner jacket stage when he married a senator's daughter in Washington, will need to ply his news gusets with legal wiles. I wonder if the practice will not have lost its mystery now that every hotel has its tap room within lobby stepping distance and it is no longer a privilege to sneak up to the managerial oasis for mid-afternoon dosages.

I seem to hear too, an echo of ghostly sneers, sounding strangely like the voices of Fohl, Carrigan, Wagner and Collins, who failed to transform their coveys of male Cinderellas into something beautiful and some of whom went stamping off into oblivion in a huff. Because any or all of them might have achieved greatness if they had come along under Yawkey's patronage and had, like Harris, a lot of expensive material dumped in their laps. The only difference is that nobody expected them to do much with what they had in the old days, while Harris is apt to have his hide on the fence if he doesn't run one, two, three.

It is something of a relief too not to have to tell you that Lefty Grove has been stripped of his tonsils last winter, or maybe had his sinus tapped or his appendix pruned, so that he will be able to win a reasonable number of games. And it will be nice too when Harris begins to see daylight this time, that it will not be a false dawn, mirage or reflection of heat lightning.

Chicago Hawks' 'Kid Line' Won't Take Much Kidding

Toronto has its famous kid line of Joe Primeau, Charlie Conacher and Busher Jackson. But those "kids" are aging now, serving their third season under the big top. Latest of the new "kid line" sensations is that of the Chicago Hawks, Kendall, Leswick and Trudel. All three played last year in the American Association, but have made the major league grade with plenty to spare. They face Shoreless Bruins tonight at Garden.

Lions Risk Smallpox to See Mexican Fiesta

By BILL CORUM

Tucson, Ariz., Dec. 23—It is unusual for the writer to sit in his shirt-sleeves in the courtyard of an ancient hacienda and wish his friends a Merry Christmas. But it seems to be an old Spanish custom. So from Tucson to the Tenderloin and the hotdog pitches and flea circuses of old Broadway, to the loop in Chicago, the Gold Coast, to California, and to wherever else these sometimes light lines are sometimes read, a happy holiday and happy hunting in 1933.

Also to his fellow workers and to all the members of a great craft, the newspaper boys, and to all lovers of sport and to the youngsters who will be the athletic heroes and the successful Americans of tomorrow. Even to Tay Thornhill and them Stanford-your Columbia correspondent extends greetings of the season.

And most especially to a great man in a great job, the smiling gentleman of Washington, who is ... King it possible for this rich, happy and prosperous land to smile again, the same many times over. May he greet many more cheery Christmas Days.

WEEK AT TUCSON

Although the Columbia team arrived in Tucson in good shape and spirits, after a wonderful trip in which it saw nothing save sunny skies, it will appreciate a week-and-a-half and rest in the hospitable Arizona city. The players were beginning to get a bit bored and travel-worn.

After all, it is no cinch for a youngster to ride 2000 miles through strange country, attend an alumni luncheon a day, practice football on an alien field, meet and greet a host of strange faces and inquiring reporters and photographers, and keep himself in what might be called fighting trim.

It was difficult to tell many times during the trip whether these boys were football players or moving picture stars, so much attention did they receive in each city where they stopped. But all that is behind them now, and Little believes they will get their land legs back after a couple of days here.

SMALLPOX EPIDEMIC

Perhaps it was just as well that yesterday's reception in El Paso was somewhat curtailed due to a smallpox epidemic across the Rio Grande in Juarez. The Mexicans are engaged in their Christmas fiesta during this season and the original plan was to take the entire party on a Chinatown tour of the city. This had to be either called off or the boys had to submit to vaccination and somehow they didn't relish the idea of playing Stanford with sore arms.

But the kids insisted on seeing Juarez from the buses regardless.

"If Stanford is as tough as we have been reading in the papers," asked the cocksy Cliff Montgomery, "what difference is a little smallpox going to make to us?"

The native sons will be surprised and shocked to learn that Harry (Cotton Tops) Grayson has turned traitor to the cause of Stanford. Even though his young nephew, Bobby, is one of Thornhill's backfield mainstays, "Cotton Tops" is now a hundred per cent Columbian.

Or so he announced at last night's dinner to Little.

"I'll stop that nephew of mine if you let me get in there," he announced, banging his fist on the table so hard the Mexican consul, who was trying to sleep upstairs, lodged a protest with the management.

"I'll stop him."

"And if I don't," he discreetly added in a lower tone, "I'll tell his mother on him."

LIONS ARRIVE IN TUCSON

Coach Lou Little said the team was in good shape but train weary and he planned only a light work out this afternoon at the University of Arizona football field. He said there would be no practice Sunday.

In spite of incident requests from Pasadena, Little intends to keep the squad here until the end of next week. It will not appear in the city of roses before Sunday morning.

The general feeling aboard the special which brought almost as many newspapermen as players, was that Columbia would win the game.

Christmas will be observed at the Lions' hotel. While the day will be given over to rest, the team has a stiff schedule of work mapped out for next week.

TAP'S TIPS

Bruins and Hawks Play Rubber Game Tonight

By BILL GRIMES

In their third conflict of the National Hockey League championship, the Bruins and the Chicago Blackhawks meet tonight at the Boston Garden. Going into tonight's tie, the count is one all, the Bruins having hung a 2 to 0 shutout on the Hawks here a month ago and in turn were blanked, 1 to 0 in the Windy City.

Prior to the last visit of Manager Tommy Gorman and his Hawkes, the Bruins had only one game to their credit in four starts but they had previously defeated Chicago and one tie with a victory after one of the most thrilling games in years. Vic Ripley scored the [illegible] second the [illegible] during a scrimmage on the opening [illegible] and the second Bruin [illegible] came after a spot face off in the [illegible], when Nels Stewart passed back and Dit Clapper sunk the puck in the strings.

At the Garden tonight will be the best goal tenders in the N. H. L., Tiny Thompson and Chuck Gardner. The Bruins have been [illegible] more than [illegible] Gardner for two tallies this season but Tiny has let the Hawks down with one lone goal. The Hawks goalie has the best record for the season, [illegible] 17 games he has allowed only [illegible] goals scored for Thompson. [illegible]

Now that [illegible] has united a w[illegible] more than [illegible] back the Windy City [illegible] Rosenau have gained five points in their last two [illegible] of which were played in New York. They are a full game back of the Hawks and therefore a victory tonight will move them into a second place tie, which if Les Canadiens takes the Red Wings in Montreal will leave them only a half game from Detroit, the American division leaders.

PA STRIBLING BRINGS JIM BACK INTO MONEY

Miami, Fla., Dec 23 (AP)—Another fight of major importance to be sought for Miami's winter card—Mickey Walker, former middleweight champion, against either Johnny Risko or Jimmy Maloney—has been announced.

Ed Douglas, promoter with Pa Stribling in the Coral Gables Coliseum, said he had been advised by Walker's manager, Jack Kearns, in New York, that the former champion would meet here on January 25 the winner of the Risko-Maloney fight scheduled for January 4.

Other matches definitely signed or tentatively scheduled include:

Vince Dundee, middleweight champion, and Tommy Freeman, former welterweight titlist, tentatively set for late this month or in January; Maxie Rosenbloom and Joe Knight, tentatively slated for late in January or early in February, and the Madison Square Garden show, Carnera against Loughran, on February 22.

SARAZEN NAMES 'ALL' GOLF TEAM

Miami, Dec. 23—The rising young giants of a new generation in American golf use many sounding the death knell of the mighty men of the past, in the opinion of Gene Sarazen, who today announced his second annual All-America golf team.

His team follows: No. 1, Denny Shute; No. 2 Craig Wood; No. 3, Joe Kirkwood; No. 4, Paul Runyan; No. 5, Leo Diegel; No. 6, Macdonald Smith; No. 7, Walter Hagen; No. 8, Ralph Guldahl; No. 9, Willie Goggin; No. 10, Willie MacFarlane.

The 1933 array named by Sarazen sounds the keynote of the onrush of youth. Hagen and MacSmith, second and third in Sarazen's 1932 Big Ten, have dropped to seventh and sixth places, and for the second successive year, Tommy Armour, Johnny Farrell, Al Espinosa, Joe Turnesa, Bill Mehlhorn and other big names, once familiar in the ballot of [illegible] are missing.

GROVE FINDS GOOD CATCHERS SCARCE IN MAJORS

Ace Southpaw Pays High Tribute To Cochrane

By Lefty Grove
As Told to Austin Lake
CHAPTER VI

I remember very clearly being beaten 2 to 1 by the Senators four days after the opening of the 1931 season, one of the four games that I lost that year. I never had so much stuff, and although I held the club to five hits, all five of them went for extra bases. I recall it particularly because we had the bases full in the seventh inning with two out and Al Simmons, who led the league in hitting that year, was at the bat. Right there Marberry relieved Sam Jones for Washington and struck Al out.

There, incidentally, is one of the greatest relief pitchers that the game has ever seen, "Firpo" Marberry. At least he was until a couple of seasons ago when they suddenly made him take his regular starting turn. In 1924 he pitched in 64 ball games and yet did not start a single game. In the last ten years he has pitched in 491 ball games. Think of it! That is more games than Dolphe Luque, the Cuban pitcher with Brooklyn, has pitched in his 16 years of major league play.

Young pitchers have a tendency to overwork a certain type of pitch, usually their favorite ball. Perhaps they have a particularly good curve, and they keep throwing it up most of the time. But believe me, if you serve that pitch often enough, no matter how good it is, the batters will begin to lay for it and then there is nothing left except to put up the shutters and call it a day.

Waite Hoyt had a theory on this subject.

"Let 'em see your good one once in a while," he would say, "just often enough to let them know you have it. Then put it back in the box until you need it."

Of course, most of the blame for overworking a pitch should fall on the shoulders of the catcher. Smart managers usually match a young pitcher with a seasoned catcher. And let me say right here that good catchers are rare, and poor catching can go a long way toward spoiling good pitching. Mickey Cochrane, who worked almost all my games, when we were with the Athletics, has been a great blessing to me, not alone because he is a great receiver, but because he thinks like a pitcher, has the ability to see things from the angle of the pitcher's box.

Catchers Dislike Being "Shaken Off"

That is why I seldom have had to "shake off" any of Mickey's signs. Few things annoy a catcher so much as to be "shaken off," and yet a lot of pitchers in the major leagues do it. The custom, when a sign is refused, is for the pitcher to stand motionless and keep staring until the catcher crouches again and revised his signal . . . though "Grouches" is a better word for it.

Before I dismiss the subject of control, I must mention one type of ball that is a law unto itself, and which will take such odd twists and swoops that even the pitcher who throws it cannot tell just what is going to happen. That is the so-called knuckle-ball, although the same effect may be had by holding it in other ways than by the knuckles.

The usual method is to grip the ball with the finger nails, or with knuckles of the first two fingers. It is then released on an overhand motion with the fingers being thrust smartly forward at the point of release. If properly done this prevents the ball from spinning. It simply moves in the air without turning over.

Naturally the ball does not travel at a high speed and, as it approaches the plate, catches the little currents of air that cross its path. That is the reason that it cannot be controlled, because the pitcher cannot foretell what stray wind eddy the ball is going to run into.

When the ball is thrown skillfully as when George Pipgras, my new teammate with the Red Sox, or Ed Rommel used to throw it when with the Athletics, it dips and rolls like a crazy thing, sliding from one eddy back to another and, perhaps, finally swooping sharply off to one side. I have seen Rommel's knuckle ball break two feet in different directions on a day when the wind was blowing directly toward the pitching box. But the very uncertainty of the pitch, effective as it is, makes it too dangerous to use in the pinch and most pitchers use it only as a side gadget when there is nothing important at stake.

Now here is queer incident relating to that pitch. A friend of mine, a newspaperman, who was on the hunt for a feature yarn, went to a professor of physics in a Philadelphia university not long ago and asked him for a scientific explanation of what makes a baseball curve. The professor took a piece of chalk and promptly wrote a formula with a lot of X's and Y's on the blackboard. Then he explained the size of the curve depends entirely on the amount of spin the pitcher put on the ball.

"Without spin," said the professor, "there would not be any curve."

"Hold on," said the newspaperman, "what about the 'knuckle ball'?"

"What is that?" asked the professor, who evidently was not a close follower of baseball.

Slow Stuff Never Served Combs

The newspaperman described the ball, the way it was thrown and how it acted. The professor smiled "no such thing," he said emphatically. "It must be an optical illusion. There is no law in physics which would allow a ball to act like that unless it is spinning."

Being a wise lad, the newsman merely smiled and let the matter drop. But when he told it to me later, he said, "I wish that fellow could stand behind the plate when Rommel was pitching his floater. He might learn something that is not in his school book."

John McGraw used to have a hard and fast law for his batters on all "floaters" and pitches. "Either take 'em, or bunt 'em, he would order, and to this day, although McGraw has retired, the Giants fellow that rule. Many American League batters practice the same policy, calling the slow pitch a "sucker ball" and refusing to bite. But one man who will hit it hard and safely most of the time is Earl Combs of the Yankees. Nobody has thrown Earl a slow ball for years.

Home Town Boy Makes Good — By Charlie Schmidt

In 1927, his third year with the Athletics, Grove added control to his blinding speed and entered the 20-victory class, gaining exactly a score of wins, while losing 13 games. He has never won fewer or lost more games in a campaign since. "Lefty" neither admits nor denies that he located the plate by taking Connie Mack's advice to count 10 between getting the catcher's sign and making the pitch.

Grove received a salary of $10,000 for his first season in Philadelphia. He was given a $2000 raise in '27 and $3000 more the following year. He had a tidy nest egg by this time and invested part of it in a modern home for his wife, two children and himself in his native Lanaconing, Md. He spends all his spare time by the family fireside in the Cumberland hills.

There's one bowling and billiard emporium in Lanaconing. Grove owns that, having taken it over shortly after purchasing his home. He manages to keep out of the "red" on the venture, and it gives him something to do between hunting trips during the winter months. "Lefty" occasionally bowls a string or shoots a game of pool, but he spends most of his time sitting out front smoking

While it's Grove's boast that nobody ever showed him how to pitch he admits that he learned plenty about the art by closely following the work of the hill headliners when he broke into the majors. He watched every move of such masters as Herb Pennock, Jack Quinn, Eddie Rommel and Waite Hoyt. He had the stuff. He learned from the veterans how to make use of it.

RANGERS SAIL ON ICE TOUR

The American Rangers, United States amateur hockey representatives, sail on the Cunard Liner Laconia at 9 o'clock tonight. The team is headed for Europe, where it is to meet the leading hockey sextets of England, France, Italy, Switzerland and Germany. It leaves on its return voyage home Feb. 28.

Walter Brown, who in his capacity as manager, is taking his third team across the waters, this one to play in defense of its world championship title, won at Prague last winter, is taking nine players.

They will be met in Paris by Ian "Iron Mike" Baldwin, former Harvard star, who is now in Paris on banking business.

Most of the Rangers' personnel is from the Olympic Hockey Club team, also managed by Brown.

The local players on the team will be Fred McDonnell, former Harvard freshman star and now out of college; Eddie Keating of Melrose; Walter Bender, last year's Boston University captain, and Bob Jeremiah, brother of Dartmouth Eddie. Frank "Junior" Stubbs of Newton, brother of the Harvard hockey coach, now working in New York, is also a member of the team.

Coast Roars Salute to Salem High Gridmen

Los Angeles, Dec. 22—California roared out a welcome in its inimitable style to Mayor George J. Bates and the Salem, Mass., high school football squad on their arrival here. But from all reports they plan to even up matters when Urban Military Academy lines up on Wrigley Field tomorrow afternoon to battle the witches for the mythical prep school championship of the nation.

Urban Academy is strictly a prep school, used as a farm for the leading colleges of Western grid fame, including University of Southern California of Los Angeles, St. Mary's and Santa Barbara. The smallest "kid" on the club weighs 165 and more than one tip the scale over 200.

Cognizant of the dangerous climatic change, Broderick has for days planned to throw passes. Instead of hurling his high scoring full back "Tim" Mavrakos against the rival forward line he will also order Peckham to split his line and run most of his play from punt formation.

Last night Mayor George J Bates and the other 28 members of the party sat down to a banquet and reception at the famous Sardi's night club on Hollywood blvd. Their host was J. F. Kaufman, millionaire leather manufacturer of Boston with factories in Salem and other parts of New England. Together with many other wealthy Californians he is going to "show Salem the town."

Joe E. Brown, famous screen comedian was host to the party yesterday at lunch in the Warner Brothers studios at Hollywood. He wise-cracked for the boys, autographed their diaries, posed for pictures, and escorted the Salem group on a tour of the different lots. He has reserved an entire section of seats for the game and will bring with him many famous stars. Brown is a member of the Urban school advisory board.

Salem will not lack for support, either for Dan O'Brien and Al Chandler, two former Salemites, are rounding up all the New Englanders living here with instructions for all to purchase their seats in the same section.

North Cambridge Six in Five Game Junket

By WALTER KILEY

North Cambridge, long recognized as one of the most generous contributors to sports ranks, is represented on the ice this winter by one of the most promising sextets in amateur ranks.

Manager Oscar Robillard is enthused over the team's possibilities that he is completing arrangements for an eight-day trip to New York, Baltimore, Hersey, Pa., and Atlantic City to be taken shortly after New Year's.

Five games are to be played on the southern jaunt but in the meanwhile the North Cambridge Hockey Club has an important engagement in Lewiston, Maine, on Jan 2, and another in the making with Doug Everett's Concord N. H. skaters

To date, the Cantabs have played only one game, which failed to show them to their best advantage for the reason that they had enjoyed only one and one-half hours of previous practice.

9000 AT TILT

They were beaten only 3-1 by the New York A. C. in Madison Square Gardens. Glowing reports preceded their return to Boston. More than 9000 spectators were present that night, the game being one of several amateur hockey contests scheduled

Boston followers will get their first opportunity of witnessing the local favorites in action on Christmas night when the Cantabs and the Olympic Club share the Boston Arena spotlight in a doubleheader with Berry Hockey Club and Union Boat Club.

Of the 15 players on the squad, nine are residents of Cambridge, most of that number from the northern end of the city.

Carl Kempy, Paul Donovan and Hal Roche are form Melrose and Al Hayden and Art Levera from Somerville

JOHNSON IS ACE

Dick Johnson who played on Sonny Foley's Rindge Tech a year ago, has come along fast and is expected to be one of Robillard's mainstays before the season progresses far

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

One month ago the Bruins clicked for the first time this season while playing the Blackhawks. Fresh from their first win of the year, the Rossmen raced the Hawks up and down the Garden ice and finally were awarded a 2 to 0 victory.

The only spot face off that has been called here this season occurred during the third period of the first Bruin-Chicago game. Following out a prearranged plan, Nels Stewart passed back to "Dit" Clapper, who whistled a shot into the Hawks' net, which Chuck Gardiner never saw, for Stewart and Conacher were both blocking his vision.

Although they will pay particular attention to the goal tending of Tiny Thompson and Chuck Gardiner, which is expected to feature tonight's game, the fans will also watch "Dit" Clapper, who was recently converted into a defense man. Clapper was a sensation, both offensively and defensively, against the Maroons and the Hawks will have a sad awakening if they think that they are going to race around him at will.

Each and every member of the Blackhawks was anxious to get some authentic information concerning the condition of "Ace" Bailey. Upon learning that the Maple Leaf player was on the road to recovery, the Chicago players expressed their sympathy for Eddie Shore.

Carrying a beautiful doll, one of her many birthday presents, Joan Bailey visited her daddy yesterday. "Ace" was delighted to see his little daughter, who had a fine laugh when he took off the doll's bonnet and put it on his own head.

"Ace" is coming along fast. He is much stronger and is now talking a little. He cannot figure out why he should remain in bed and says that he wants to return to Toronto, for he is feeling O. K. He's one of the marvels of the age, according to the medical men who have attended him.

Ben Berenson, sponsor and manager of the Berry Hockey Club, showed some rare sportsmanship when he gave up a practice session at the Arena to allow the North Cambridge H. C. to work out before tackling the New York A. C. He's a type of hockey manager seldom seen, at least in these parts. But for Berenson and Walter Brown, the Cantabs would have been obliged to play the Winged Foot without any practice.

Regardless of their selection, if hockey players resort to headguards they will be less apt to meet with head injuries. The objection to head protectors is the heat in the present day rinks, especially New York but if the new guards are light as well as serviceable, they will be readily adopted by all players.

Rangers Send Best Wishes to Shore

Close on the telegram from his Edmonton neighbors assuring him of their hearty support and cordial good wishes, Eddie Shore, today received a telegram from the New York Ranger Hockey Club, which he will prize as highly. It reads as follows.

New York, Dec 23

Eddie Shore

We are all delighted with the wonderful news this morning about Bailey. We all appreciate the terrible strain that was inflicted on you and the trying ordeal that you have so courageously overcome. The New York Rangers wish you and your little family the happiest Christmas you have ever had

Bruin Players Must Wear Head Guards

The Boston Bruins hockey team will start the New Year right—by wearing a new type of head guard "whether they like it or not," Manager Art Ross announced today.

"I never want to see an accident such as happened in the Bruins-Toronto game when Ace Bailey and Eddie Shore were seriously injured," said Ross.

Ross expressed the hope that other teams in the N. H. L. would adopt similar headguards.

'PANTHER' SEES MAT TITLE

PROMISES HE'LL PIN BROWNING AT GARDEN

"Panther" Joe Malcewicz says he is going to drop a defeat into Jim Browning's stocking at the Christmas night wrestling show at the Boston Garden. And take Browning's New York heavyweight title as a little Christmas gift.

The "Panther" has been clawing around the throne room for many years. He caused champions more chills than any other wrestler.

As a boy, the "Panther" licked Earl Caddock, but wasn't smart enough at the time to claim the title. He later ran Joe Stecher out of the ring at the Arena.

And speaking of Jim Londos, ladies and gentlemen, it was shocking the way Malcewicz treated the Greek heavyweight at Worcester.

There was a show for a Greek church which was in urgent need of funds. Londos was wrestling a third-rate opponent, and was given a rousing ovation when he entered the ring.

Malcewicz, wearing smoked glasses, then stepped to the center of the ring. Londos thought the "Panther" was the big, bad wolf and was very much afraid.

"I would like to give $1000 to your little Greek church," said Joe in his best English. "I will donate this sum if Londos will wrestle me."

Earl McCready, Leo Numa, Jack Wagner and a flock of other mat stars will appear on the supporting card.

CONNIE MACK 71 YRS. OLD TODAY

Philadelphia, Dec. 23 (AP)—Connie Mack, grand old man of baseball, celebrated his 71st birthday today with his mind still on the players' dugout—not the fireside.

Full of plans for next year, the man who turned a white elephant into a championship baseball machine—the Philadelphia Athletics—has no thought of retiring, although his allotted span of life was up a year ago.

"I'll never retire," he said. "I'll continue managing as long as I feel I can help my players."

Philadelphia, Dec. 23 (AP)—Connie Mack, who has often said he would never fly, took his first airplane ride today as part of his 71st birthday celebration.

"Say, that's great," he declared on alighting after 45 minutes in the air. "Now I can understand hy every body, once up, wants to be in the air all the time."

The plane soared at about 2000 feet. Mack got his first thrill picking out the two major leage baseball parks.

"Mr. Mack is a fine airman," Bircher said after the hop. "He didn't become nervous and was keenly interested in the experience."

Clark Rides After 6th Polo Crown

Big Tim Clark starts his quest for his sixth Boston indoor polo championship tonight at Commonwealth Armory when he leads the Canaries, present champions, against Candlewood trio, led by his uncle, Albert C. Burrage, Jr. In the preliminary 110th Cavalry will ride against an all-star White Mountain Polo Ranch triumvirate, featuring the Penn Military stars, Captain Joe Poor and Buddy Pickering.

Clark, who is New England's leading polo player, was crew captain, star football tackle and bruising hockey player in his Harvard days, as well as polo leader.

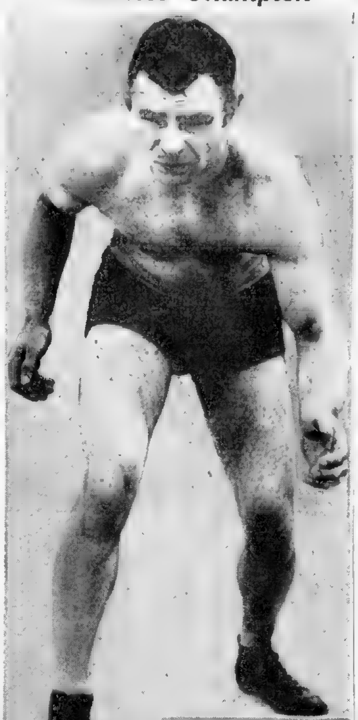
Throneless Champion



Twice "cheated" out of a mat championship, Panther Joe Malcewicz intends to flatten Jim Browning, Monday night at the Garden. Joe wants that title now.

MR. BOSTON

THE FELLOW is so modest and unassuming that his face will turn red when he reads this story. He gives thousands of dollars to charity each year, and doesn't ask a thank you from anybody. He says his good Dutch mother down in Pennsylvania taught him to give a share of his earnings to the poor.

Even this brief story would not have been written if it had not been for Tom Robertson, managing editor of the Boston Evening American. Managing editors have a great many important duties to perform as they set a terrific pace for the rest of the staff in the race for newspaper circulation.

Mr. Boston

Tom Robertson has kept this newspaper well out in the lead of its competitors. I consider the Boston Evening American the best edited newspaper in the United States.

Despite the heavy call upon his time as managing editor of a great newspaper, Tom Robertson has personally directed the Christmas Basket Fund. He enjoys doing so, and takes a great deal of pride in the fact that during the years of the depression the Basket Fund has been able to relieve poverty here and bring joy to thousands of people at this time of the year.

PAUL BOWSER staged several wrestling shows for the Basket Fund. They gave the fund more than $6000. This money will enable 1500 families, consisting of 7500 persons, to have a happy Christmas. Paul Bowser should be able to enjoy his own Christmas knowing the vast amount of happiness he has been able to create.

There should also be a few words of praise for Ed Don George, Henri DeGlane, Gus Sonnenberg, Joe Savoldi and the other wrestlers who appeared at the Basket Fund shows.

THE BOSTON GARDEN, Andy Callahan and Vince Dundee are also entitled to a few cheers for the aid they rendered in the Christmas Basket Fund's wrestling show.

Tom Robertson also asked me to thank the thousands of New England sports fans who helped make these various sports promotions successful by their attendance at them.

Members of the Sporting Department, headed by the brilliant Austen Lake, will try to show their appreciation of what the fans have done for the Basket Fund by continuing to give them the best sporting pages.

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to each and every one of you.

THERE IS A hitch to the proposed bout between Primo Carnera and Max Baer for the heavyweight championship of the world. This match is planned for New York next June.

Baer is willing to step out on Jack Dempsey and join up with the New York Garden to get the shot at Carnera, but he isn't willing to sign to defend his championship for the Garden if he smacks Carnera on the chin.

Baer would like to be a free agent as champion with the right to sign with the highest bidder.

The Garden has managed to retain its control over the heavyweight division since the days of Jack Dempsey. It has done so by refusing a challenger a crock at the title unless he first signs with the Garden.

THE FALLING off in attendance and receipts at wrestling shows have caused Jim Browning Ed Don George and Jim Londos to decide to take more risks than they formerly did. The headliners in the heavyweight group all appear willing to shoot it out to see which is the better man.

George has repeatedly declared he was willing to meet all comers. Within a period of three days he defeated "Jumping" Joe Savoldi and held Jim Browning to a draw. Don is much younger than Londos and is of the opinion he would conquer the Greek heavyweight in a finish match.

Browning, like George, is young and will stand a great deal of beating. Strangler Lewis recently told me he considered Jim the best wrestler in the world.

Browning will meet some rugged opposition when he collides with "Panther" Joe Malcewicz at the Garden on Christmas night. The "Panther" has been my idea of one of the greatest wrestlers in the world for a number of years.

DAILY ROUNDUP

Our New York operatives report that Babe Ruth would be the manager of the Yankees next season if Joe McCarthy hadn't been given a three-year contract last winter, and that the Bambino will be retained as a player until he can be named pilot of the club in 1936.

Natick Tommy Connolly, chief of the American League umpires, officiated at the opening of Fenway Park, the Yankee Stadium, Cleveland Stadium, the old Hilltop park in New York and several other famed baseball orchards, but as much as he would like to he won't return to harness for the dedication of Tom Yawkey's new plant at the Fens.

"I tried," he says, "to come back when they opened the municipal stadium in Cleveland. That cured me. It can't be done. I may be in Boston when the Sox make their debut on their new field, but I'll be in the stands watching younger arbiters work."

Greater Boston colleges will be well represented at the various football meetings for coaches and athletic directors at Chicago on Dec. 26, 27 and 28. Most of the local contingent will entrain on Christmas night. Eddie Casey, Bill Bingham and Eskie Clark of Harvard, Joe McKenney and Jack Curley of Boston College, Dr. John M. Harmon of Boston University and Clarence "Pop" Houston of Tufts are the representatives.

Harmon is already in Chicago and will make a stop at New York City before returning to Boston on Jan. 2. He hopes to bring back definite news of his successor as Boston University football coach. John Curley has contracted two important engagements for Chicago which may wind up with Boston College playing two of the leading elevens of the country in the 1935 season.

Barney Ross made a tour of the newspapers to say a few words about the fighting ability of Dick Madden of Roxbury. Madden recently stepped out front in the fistic parade when he gave Unknown Winston a hard battle at Mechanics Building. A draw would have been a good verdict. Madden will try to win a duke over Winston early next year.

Sam Pian writes from Chicago that Barney Ross is willing to give Sammy Fuller a shot at his world's lightweight title. It is expected that Fuller will clash with Tony Canzoneri in Chicago the latter part of January, and that the victor of this bout will get the tussle with Ross.

An effort is being made to sign Werther Arcelli, North End welterweight, and fighting Andy Callahan. The Garden and Rip Valenti are both in the field for this bout.

Elmer "Chipper" Ward, the South End's gift to golf, now of Fewton, Sanford, Me., and Knoxville, Tenn., and a former New England amateur champion has announced that not only will he play in the annual New Year's Day open tournament at the Wollaston Golf Club, but that he will wear one of his famous Palm Beach suits.

Fran Lane, Harvard's all around sophomore athlete, will report to Coach Joe Stubbs after the holidays. Lane was injured during the Army game and it will be at least another month before he will be in shape to take his place on the Crimson defense.

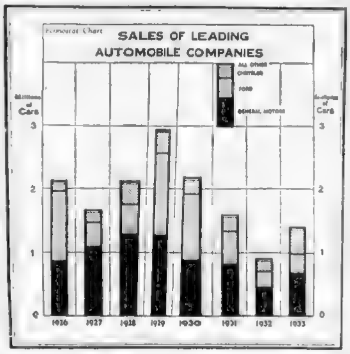
Auto Sales Increase



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Editor The Economist

This chart shows two facts of considerable interest not only to the automobile industry but to the lay public. The first is the fact that 1933 definitely terminates a three-year decline in sales. This has been a trying period not only for the producers but also for the statisticians.

During the entire previous experience of the industry a very regular sequence has prevailed. There have been two years of improvement, followed by one year of recession. Whenever the improvement was resumed it was invariably on a higher level and thus the line of automobile production presented a saw tooth appearance, with a decided rising angle. The succession of three years of decline has routed the precedent which 25 years of automobile experience seems to have established.

Actual figures for the first ten months with estimates for the remaining two show that the automobile companies will turn out approximately 1,500,000 passenger units as compared with 1,098,342 units in 1932, an increase of 37 per cent. Commercial cars and trucks will run a little short of 260,000 units and show an improvement of 32 per cent over 1932.

The second fact brought out emphatically by the chart is the complete domination of the industry by three great producers, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler. These three account for 84 per cent of total sales for 1933. General Motors as a whole sells the lions share. Its leader, Chevrolet, sets the pace for all other producers.

Actual figures of the three leading makes for the first ten months of 1933 are 436,888 Chevrolets, 271,994 Fords, 218,491 Plymouths. These figures may be compared with the corresponding figures for 1932, 305,724 Chevrolets, 232,100 Fords, 95,588 Plymouths.

TODAY'S NEWS OF LEADERS

PICK-UP in silver mining operations is expected to benefit oil companies serving the mining area. Such companies as Continental Oil, Standard of Indiana, Shell Union and Texas Co. distribute oil in western states.

New Year's Lows Rule on Big Bull Day

On the biggest bull stock market day in months, new lows for the year were made by 19 stocks, while nine set new highs. A very strange market oddity.

Southern Pacific's Loadings Good

It is understood Southern Pacific's loadings for the current week to be released Tuesday will show another good gain over the like 1932 period, although not as great as the 4000-car increase registered in the week ended December 16 compared with a year ago. Movement of perishables is understood to be continuing in good volume. Southern Pacific stands to benefit from the reopening of the Nevada silver mines.

L. & N. Dividend Move Is Delayed

Louisville & Nashville directors were influenced largely by the dividend tax in delaying the declaration of a dividend on the stock If business holds up to expectations, a dividend is likely to be declared in the first quarter of 1934 and possibly at the January meeting

PRICE CHANGES ONLY NARROW FOR LEADERS

New York, Dec. 23—Price changes for most leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange were only narrow. Rallying tendencies appeared in the second hour.

The market ran into profit taking at the start, resulting in considerable irregularity and generally lower prices. Trading was comparatively light and declines were generally confined to fractions.

Some of yesterday's buoyancy was revived in a few of the rails under leadership of Atchison.

Trading in the silvers was rather quiet while profit-taking was being absorbed.

Stocks displayed a mixed tone in the first hour. Volume was light. U. S. Steel issues were strong with the common gaining about a point while the preferred skyrocketed more than 6 points. U. S. Industrial Alcohol was more than 3 points higher. Crown Cork & Seal was 2 points above last nights close.

Losses of 1 to 2 or more points were recorded by Air Reduction, Allied Chemical, American Smelting, American Tobacco B, Auburn, Cerro De Pasco, Columbian Carbon, du Pont, United Fruit and U. S. Smelting.

Point or better improvement was noted for Atchison, Corn Products, Gold Dust, United Carbon and Western Union. American Telephone was a major fraction higher.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 400,000.

Owing to the fact that the Treasury was closed for the Christmas holidays, no gold price was announced and the previous rate of $34.08 an ounce continued in force. Most foreign exchanges were quiet, the British pound sterling being quoted at $5.10⅝, up ½ cent, while French francs were unchanged at 6.11¼ cents.

Aside from the silver influence, various political and trade factors were being studied by mraket analysts. There were many conjectures as to just how Congress would perform.

Brokerage circles were also wondering whether legislation pertaining to the regulation of speculation would be enacted. The opinion was general that there would be no great demand for new inflationary measures, although it was expected that many of these would be introduced.

Wall Street noted reported remarks of the President that he hoped a world-wide silver agreement could be extended to other monetary bases. In some quarters this was interpreted as meaning a desire for currency stabilization, although it was pointed out that the chief executive did not use the word gold.

Most banking quarters hold the belief that, while the administration might like to get back on the gold standard at a lower dollar ratio, an international monetary agreement probably would be difficult at the moment because of economic and political situations in some of the European countries.

State St. Circles Call Larger Gold Fund Significant

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State st. financial circles are giving the silver buying program, a cheer, as they would anything that managed to bring the markets to life. But they believe the really significant part of the President's program is in the increase in funds set aside by the R. F. C. to purchase gold in the markets of the world. The latter indicates the real determination to raise prices.

The important increase in the money supply is not going to come from issuing silver certificates in the limited amounts indicated. It is going to come from devaluation. At present prices for gold the circulating medium could be increased by nearly 70 per cent. This is the reflationary step to keep an eye on and never mind silver monetization for the present.

LITTLE KNOWN MINERS BOOM

While smelting and mining shares generally responded to new silver plans with an upsurge it is notable that, for the most part, they did not exceed the highs of late fal. On the other hand, some of the shares of companies producing silver ore had quite a day of it. But these issues are hardly known to the investing public.

Notes: In the East relatively few traders are familiar with Sunshine Mining . . . It sprang from under $2 to above $5 overnight . . . Bunker Hill Sullivan, while better known hereabouts, could hardly be termed a widely held favorite . . . It jumped ahead about 10 points without any intervening stops on better earnings prospects.

Not realizing that our barometer figures were followed quite closely by some we neglected to note they broke through on the donwside early this week. This negative signal has now been retracted, however, since the industrials rose abov 96.15 and the rails topped 53.70 yesterday. We will not omit the next change.

Business Trend in Week Is Upward

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—Statistics appearing during the past week indicated a higher rate of business activity, according to Moody's index figures for freight car loadings, electric power production and steel ingot output.

These index figures are adjusted for seasonal variation—that is, if the change from the previous week should coincide with the normal seasonal change, the index figure would be unchanged.

British Cotton Trade Up

Washington, Dec. 23—British export trade in cotton and rayon-mixed goods recovered in October some of the ground lost in preceding months, according to a report from the American consulate-general, London, made public by the Commerce Department. Total October shipments amounted to 4,230,947 square yards, a figure not only well above the monthly average for the year but 36 per cent higher than for October, 1932.

Hercules' Net Is $36,352

Cleveland, Dec. 23—Hercules Motors Corp. for the quarter ended September 30, 1933, earned net profit of $36,352 after taxes, depreciation and charges, equal to 11 cents a share on 310,100 shares of common stock, against net loss of $24,638 in the preceding quarter and net loss of $27,452 in September quarter of 1932. Nine months' net loss was $32,260, against net loss of $80,164 in the first nine months of 1932.

Autos Big Radio Market

New York, Dec. 23—The market for radio sets is constantly being widened by the equipment of practically all new automobiles with built-in aerials. It is understood that more than half a million radios were installed in autos during the past year. More than one-third of Cadillac-LaSalle cars sold during 1933 were delivered with radios installed, and 12 out of every 100 Chevrolet buyers had sets included when they took delivery. The demand is expected to continue next year, but, as in the case of the rest of the radio trade, the Standard Statistics Company, of New York, poins out, there will be plenty of competition for the business available, for no less than 50 companies are said to be producing automobile radios.

Shoemakers Resume Cutting

"Cutting operations are being resumed in a number of shoe manufacturing centers. Factories producing medium to low-priced types are best supplied with orders. Increased activities of buyers is confidently predicted with the turn of the year, at which time prices will probably undergo some strengthening," says the Shoe & Leather Report's weekly review.

Ford Dividend in Belgium Intimated

Brussels, Dec. 23—Ford Motor Co. of Belgium has intimated it may pay a dividend of 18 95-100 francs net, the same as last year.

Stockholders approved repayment of 300 francs per share from reserves, thus reducing capital to 60,000,0000 froncs from 100,000,000. Directors stated working funds will remain adequate after the payment.

Paris Ends Mixed, Berlin Closes Firm

London, Dec. 23—With the London Stock Exchange closed today in extension of the Christmas holiday, attention centered on Continental markets. Paris finished mixed, with mining shares advanced. Berlin closed firm on cheerful industrial reports.

CASH REGISTERS RING OUT HALF BILLION YULE

Washington, Dec. 23—America is having better than a half billion dollar Christmas this year and cash registers in all sections are ringing out merry defiance of the big bad wolf.

Accurate reports are not yet available but government agencies unofficially estimated that when the last sale is made tomorrow night, the total for department and mail order stores alone since Dec. 1 will be $500,000,000.

This is $138,000,000 greater than for the depression Christmas of 1933. It is believed to be the greatest amount so spent since the prosperous days of 1930.

From all directions, reports to the government are enthusiastic and optimistic. They picture the nation as convinced the desperate days of the past three years have ended.

The Federal Reserve Board reports that money circulation increased by $86,000,000 last week, showing that people are digging down into their pockets for the Yuletide.

NRA estimated that payrolls are $50,000,000 greater weekly today than a year ago and that employes have received wage increases totaling $2,000,000,000 since President Roosevelt took office.

GRANDMOTHER SAVED IN FIRE

Garrich Bovington of 141 Clay st., Wollaston, carried his 73-year-old semi-invalid grandmother to safety today as flames swept through the two-family house at that address. Four other persons were driven from the house.

The grandmother, Mrs. Kate F. King, was in her bed when smoke poured into the second floor room. The crackling flames were just burning through the floor when Bovington went to her rescue.

Mrs. Gertrudge Bovington, the man's mother, and Hugh, a brother, made their way out when they saw the grandmother was saved. The Misses Rose and Katherine Hogan, who live on the first floor, fled their apartment.

MAIL EXCEEDS 1932 FIGURES

Heavier mail and larger financial receipts than a year ago in spite of the reduction of postage from 3 to 2 cents was the report of Postmaster William E. Hurley relative to the peak in the avalanche of Christmas mail received at the Boston postoffice and sub-stations.

Compilation of statistics was made today for three of the most important postal districts, Back Bay, North and South Stations. For the first 21 days the total pieces of mail received was 22,884,044. This figure applied to first class mail. The same districts a year ago for the same time handled 21,010,410 pieces of mail, showing a gain of 873,233, or 4.44 per cent.

CWA WILL HIRE 30,000 MORE

A total of 130,000 persons is expected to be at work on CWA projects in this state by the first of the year, Chairman Joseph W. Bartlett of the Massachusetts board announced. More than 100,000 are already on the CWA payrolls.

Civil Works projects, financed entirely with federal funds, are being rushed in every city and town and men are at work already in many of them. Chairman Bartlett expressed pleasure at the speed at which the work was progressing.

A special meeting of the board was held last night to devise ways for a survey of civil and public works in an effort to make use of all possible safety methods. Inspectors will be appointed to visit all projects.

PRESIDENT'S HOLIDAY GREETING BY RADIO

Airing of Xmas Message From Washington

By N. F. T.

Here it is, just about upon us—Christmas. Mingled with all of the glorious holiday legend and caroling that loudspeakers bear, there stands out the scheduled message from President Roosevelt, being broadcast over all network air facilities, embracing NBC and CBS outlets from coast to coast (WBZ-WEEI-WNAC-WAAB) tomorrow afternoon between 5 and 5:30 p. m.

This greeting from the chief executive comes in connection with lighting of the White House Christmas tree in Washington at that time. President Roosevelt takes to the microphone immediately following the illumination ceremony.

HEAR FROM HOLY LAND

A distinctly new development in the science of shaping international broadcasts comes along by air also on Christmas Eve at 3 p. m. It's the world-wide Xmas offering to be heard (WBZ) everywhere. Choirs in the Winchester Cathedral of England and the Riverside Church in New York will be synchronized during a two-way simultaneous presentation that is to feature the singing of "Adeste Fidelis" to the accompaniment of two giant organs, one on each side of the Atlantic. Perfect timing will be essential and a radio treat will result with the achievement. In addition, strains of the famous Nativity Carillon, sounding in far off Bethlehem, shall have an honored program place. These bells in the church on the site of Christ's birthplace ring out by radio into virtually every Christian country of the world.

Ever enterprising Jack (Baron Munchausen) Pearl takes it upon himself to impersonate none other than Santa Claus tonight (WEEI) when he holds forth within the 9 to 9:30 half-hour period.

TIMELY TURN

Some sparkling widdies' Christmas doings are due when "Uncle Bob Houghton," who is in reality Ed (Yankee Philosopher) Young, conducts his "cunnies on the air" tomorrow morning. William J. Welch and his well known harmonica band will broadcast with "Uncle Bob" and offer a special mouth organ version of "Silent Night" to lend timely atmosphere.

* * *

Meanwhile, scores of splendid Yuletide features are to be found up and down the lighted dial. Enjoy them all as part of the great day of days just ahead. Here's your radio reporting Uncle N. F. T. extending the best of best wishes to all, from down deep.

Insull Pleads to Remain in Greece

Athens, Dec. 23 (INS)—Samuie Insull, indicted former Chicago utilities magnate, appealed to the supreme state council today against the Greek government's refusal to extend his residence permit beyond Jan. 31.

Insull's appeal will be heard before that date.

Thousands Given Cheer by Marion Davies

Hollywood, Dec. 23 (US)—"That," said a weary but still smiling police officer, carefully herding the last toy-laden child out of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gates yesterday, "That was SOME party!"

Five thousand youngsters and their parents thought so, too; children who went home with their arms full of dolls and scooters and roller skates and candy; parents who carried enormous baskets spilling over with turkeys and groceries and sacks of potatoes.

It happens every year at the studio, when Marion Davies gives her annual Christmas party for as many children and their parents as can crowd into the big stages, families who, without her kindly thought, would have a very slim Christmas.

It was just the kind of a show to give to that kind of an audience; plenty of comedy, plenty of excitement, mystifying magic, thrills and fun, and many of Hollywood's famous stars participated.

All the rest of the year, his name is Sidney Jarvis, but for five Christmases he has been the most jovial, the merriest, the friendliest Santa Claus who ever chuckled behind a white beard. A Marion Davies Christmas party without Sidney Jarvis as Santa Claus wouldn't be the same.

And after the show came the presents!

And to make it complete 1104 Christmas dinner baskets and 1104 16-pound sacks of potatoes were given to mothers and fathers who need it very great.

They were a tired crowd at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when the party was over—all the studio people who worked long hours to make it a success, but they didn't care.

ONE GETS DEATH FOR REICH FIRE

Leipzig, Dec. 23—Death stalked through the Supreme Court in the early morning of this murky day just before Christmas and singled out a young Dutchman, Marinus Van Der Lubbe, for the expiation of the crime of burning the German Reichstag building.

The court, after three months of trial sessions, passed a penalty of death upon Van Der Lubbe and acquitted his four co-defendants.

They were Ernst Torgler, former Communist whip in the Reichstag, and three Bulgarian refugees, Georgi Dimitroff, Blagoi Popoff and Wassil Taneff.

While no official statement has been made, it is understood efforts are under way to commute Van der Lubbe's sentence to life imprisonment.

MRS. PAGE WILL DIRECT CENSUS

Edwin S. Smith, State Commissioner of Labor and Industries, has announced the appointment of Mrs. Anne Page, of Cambridge, as director of the unemployment census of Massachusetts, which will be carried on as part of the CWA program.

The project will furnish employment to some 3000 persons, most of them women. Mrs. Page will be assisted by George Mulvey, of Dorchester, who was connected with the 1930 federal census here.

The census will deal with persons engaged in temporary occupations as well as those out of work. The information secured will be devoted to giving such persons suitable attention, it is said.

COOK-COOS

For the benefit of those who find themselves puzzled by the Administration's monetary policy, we gladly publish the following news item:

WASHINGTON.—On the order of Acting Secretary Morgenthau, guards at the Treasury were notified today that they must show respect for official superiors by standing at attention when approached or being addressed.

Maybe the guards are just a bunch of hard-money men—and have been snickering and giving their superiors the raxberry.

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

The Twentieth Century Ladies met with Mrs. R. B. Dool Thursday. Mrs. Hurbert Hawkins gave a review of Charles Morgan's book, "The Fountain." This book dwelt with the philosophies of two men who had given much time to reading and meditation. That of one led him to enjoy all nature, even to a very beautiful women who was the other man's wife. The second man gained a philosophy which taught him to bear with courage life's tragedies and rebuffs. The author tries vainly to justify a love triangle. Perhaps he meant to convey that no matter how highly cultivated one may become love will have its way. However, the opinion of the Twentieth Century Ladies was that the second man was the fine, outstanding character in the book.

AUNT BELLA—THE SHOPPERS' GUIDE.

Dear, Sympathetic Aunt Bella:

Can you help me select an appropriate gift for a great big busy man? He's just a grownup boy! He likes to laugh and play practical jokes. Sometimes I get real mad at him and then I realize he is just trying to have fun. I want to get him to exchange gifts this Christmas—and I know he will give me something nice and expensive. Poor little me can't give him costly presents. Can you suggest something that would be appropriate and not cost too much?

CUDDLES.

Well, without giving the matter much thought, Aunt Bella suggests that the woman in this situation might do well to scram to the basement of one of the many popular department stores. You can nose around there and pick up something that will be okay. Frinstance, I picked up the novelty, pictured above, the other day—and when I offered to pay for it the floor manager said, "Take it along. Just tuck it anywhere and skidoo as fast as your pretty legs will carry you. I dunno what the thing is. Guess it's a humidor."

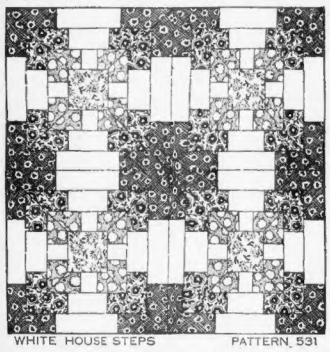
LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



WHITE HOUSE STEPS PATTERN 531

In olden times the events of the day inspired the quiltmaker with names for her quilts. Today the NRA movement has centered the eyes of the entire country on the White House and it seems especially fitting to commemorate this with a quilt—White House Steps Like Washington Pavement and Pineapple it is a quilt block which you start at the center and sew the patches on round and round. As in these quilts, too, the pattern pieces, with the exception of the center patch, are all of one width. This permits cutting the material into strips and then cutting the patches to the size needed. This pattern is most effective when the materials are shaded from a dark to a light shade of one color. A shaded chain making a very decorative quilt. Color suggestions are included with the pattern.

Pattern 531 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

THAT GIRL FROM NEW YORK

Jerry Repents Love Errors and Vows to Keep Eden in His Arms Forever

By ALLENE CORLISS

When the telephone rang the next morning at 8:30, Eden was taking a bath. She thought it was probably Anne, as Jake never called so early in the morning. She wrapped herself in a quilted satin robe and went, shivering a bit, because the apartment was cold, out into the living room to answer it. She said: "Hello—" Then she stood quite still and her fingers clutched the instrument stiffly and the room began spinning about in a sickening way. After what seemed a long time, she said:

"Oh, hello, Jerry. How are you?"

Jerry said, in what sounded like a beautifully casual voice, that he was well and that he had had her letter and thought they could talk things over better than they could write. He said he was staying at the Biltmore and he asked her if she could have lunch with him, or would dinner be better?

She said, yes, dinner would be better.

He came at exactly 7. She looked at him and saw just what she had expected to see— a tall, good-looking, blonde young man. Only he was very brown—much browner than she had ever seen him. And a little thinner. She said:

"You have a lovely tan, Jerry. You must have played a lot of golf this summer."

He said, "Yes, I did," and smiled at her and let her hand go out of his. He said, "It's nice to see you again, Eden. It seems like old times—coming to this house, I mean——"

She said, "Yes, doesn't it?" and smiled back at him. Then she said, "I thought you might like a cocktail before we go on—I mixed some in case you did."

After that, they each had a cocktail and smoked two cigarettes apiece; and they still had not said anything about why he was here with her in this quiet, firelit room. He knew that sooner or later something would have to be said and all at once it seemed that the longer he evaded it, the more difficult it would be. So he said, "About this divorce business, Eden. Perhaps you remember Rick Lawson? I think you met him once or twice. I was rooming with him the spring we—we were married. Well, I went to see him, today—he's a lawyer, you know——"

"Oh, yes—of course." Eden felt as though he had struck her suddenly, very hard. She had forgotten for a few moments that Jerry wanted this divorce—that whatever trouble and expense were involved would necessarily be negligible consideration to him. She said again: "Yes, of course. I suppose I was thinking about my work—it will make it rather bad for me, you see, if I have to be away for any length of time—" and stopped, realizing that his eyes looked puzzled.

He said, "I see." Then after a little silence, in which he seemed to go a long way off and leave her quite alone, he said: "There are certain things, Eden, I want you to know. This seems as good a time as any to tell you. I want you to know that I was all wrong about—Paul. I would go down on my knees and apologize to you only it would be embarrassing for both of us. But I want you to know that I realize that I was an awful fool and that I shall never forgive myself for behaving the way I did. I don't suppose," he concluded, looking at her for the first time, his eyes frightfully unhappy, "that you can ever forgive me—but I'd like to feel that sometime, perhaps, you might——"

She thought, "I must get out of this chair and suggest we go to dinner or I will do something foolish and stupid—" Then before she could do either, the doorbell rang suddenly, shattering the stillness in the room. Jerry said, "Who in the devil is that?" and got up and pressed the door clicker. Eden said nervously, "I can't imagine—unless it's Jake."

It wasn't. It was a Western Union boy with a telegram for Eden.

Eden asked him to excuse her while she read it, and carried it over to the fire. She tore open the envelope and opened the sheet of yellow paper. It was a day letter, it was from Jake, and it was from Chicago. She read it quickly. It said:

"I thought it would be easier to say goodby to you from Chicago than in New York. I find it is. You might write me occasionally and I will keep you posted on the war. On second thought I reject both suggestions as being no good. I have always considered letter-writing a great waste of time and much more of an aggravation than a solace. I should probably never receive any of yours, anyway, and you can read all about the war in the papers. Love, JAKE."

When she had finished reading it, she folded it and put it back in its envelope. She said, "It's from Jake."

"Wait a minute," said Jerry slowly, throwing his cigarette into the fire. "If Jake is on his way to China to write up this war, he can't be going to marry you—"

"No," said Eden, trying to speak naturally and not knowing whether or not she was really succeeding, "he isn't going to. He wanted to—but it wouldn't have worked. I'm terribly fond of Jake—but you can't marry a man just because you are fond of him—"

"Then," said Jerry, frowning a little thoughtfully, "I was wrong after all. I don't know why I was so sure it was Jake—but I was. I suppose," he concluded pleasantly, "if it's not Jake it must be someone else. There's no reason in the world why you should tell me who it is, Eden—unless you feel you want to."

Eden stared at him curiously, and said, "What's the matter, Jerry?"

When he answered her, his voice, like his laughter, was choked and unsteady. He asked her, "Do you think for a minute, Eden, that I'm going to give you a divorce just in case 'someone should come along'? Darling child, where's your sense of humor?"

Eden said, "But I don't understand—" and Jerry said, "Perhaps this will help you to," and he walked over to her and took her in his arms. He said, "Oh, Eden, darling, I've been such a fool. I've failed you so terribly in so many ways, but I never will again——"

She told him, "Don't talk, Jerry. Just hold me close like this—as if you'd never again let me go."

"I won't, darling. Never again. From now on it will always be like this——"

She listened to him, her eyes tranquil, beautifully content. She didn't believe him. It wouldn't be, of course. He would fail her again and again—never so badly, probably, and not because he meant to, but because he couldn't help it. But it wouldn't matter. Nothing would matter really, except that forever more they would be together—two people striving blindly, wistfully, and perhaps, always a little vainly, to find some measure of happiness and fulfillment in each other.

THE END.

STATE INMATES TO ENJOY YULE

Christmas festivities will be carried out extensively in every state institution, especially among children in the mental disease and the public welfare departments.

Santa Claus has been notified to visit all of these children and distribute candy, games and other toys.

Big Christmas dinners will be given in each institution. Turkey of course will be the center of attraction. Then there will be carolers, moving pictures, and special services.

Greeting cards have been sent to various inmates by Governor Ely. Five thousand of these cards also have been sent to the hospitals housing veterans.

At the State Prison in Charlestown, roast pork will be served instead of turkey, for the 900 odd prisoners there. In the Christmas program, there will be religious services, moving pictures, yard freedom and receipt of a radio broadcast in the afternoon.

The State House windows, in conformity with a custom started by Governor Fuller, will, starting tonight, reflect the gleams of more than 1000 electric candles. Also, an illuminated eight-foot wreath adorns the Bulfinch front of the Capitol directly under the cupola.

The customary Christmas parties in State House offices and exchange of gifts took place yesterday. Today the employes are enjoying a three-day holiday, the governor having authorized a skeleton force only for duty today. Governor Ely will enjoy Christmas at his home in Westfield with his immediate family. His son Richard and his wife and baby will go to Westfield from their home in Cambridge. Incidentally, this will be the first Christmas for the governor in the role of grandfather.

GALA FETE FOR CITY INMATES

Christmas Day promises to be a delightful occasion for the sick and needy inmates of the various municipal institutions and for unfortunates confined to the House of Correction at Deer Island.

Observance at Long Island Hospital, with its 1360 sick and aged patients, will begin at midnight Sunday with mass celebrated by Rev. Bennet J. O'Brien, chaplain. Turkey dinner will be served and the celebration will close with a moving picture show.

At Deer Island inmates will enjoy a turkey dinner and prisoners will present a minstrel show. Religious services will be conducted by Rev. Edward U. Conroy and Rev. George E. Stokes.

Fifty women and children at the Temporary Home in Chardon st., West End, will enjoy a Christmas tree, turkey dinner and gifts from the Junior League and Women's City Club.
